

CONTENTS

List of Illustrations and Tables · ix
Acknowledgements · xi
Introduction · 1

PART I	LATE MEDIEVAL CULTURES OF TRUST	9
CHAPTER 1	Theology: Belief in God	15
CHAPTER 2	Law and Agreements: A World Made from Promises	33
CHAPTER 3	Identity and Emotion: Faith in the Heart	63
PART II	IDENTIFYING THE TRUSTWORTHY MEN	89
CHAPTER 4	The Emergence of the Trustworthy Men	95
CHAPTER 5	Bishops Describe Trustworthiness	113
CHAPTER 6	Very Local Elites	129
PART III	TRUSTWORTHINESS AND INEQUALITY IN THE PARISH	159
CHAPTER 7	Representing the Community?	163
CHAPTER 8	Time, Place, and the Limits of Trustworthy Status	201
CHAPTER 9	Face-to-Face with the Trustworthy Men	221
PART IV	BISHOPS AND A CHURCH BUILT ON INEQUALITY AND FAITH, 1250–1500	239
CHAPTER 10	Practical Epistemology	247
CHAPTER 11	Other People's Money	267

CHAPTER 12	The Material Church	285
CHAPTER 13	Subtle Judgements	307
CHAPTER 14	The Church Built on Trust	331

Conclusion · 349

Notes · 355

Bibliography · 445

Index · 491

INTRODUCTION

IN 1328 THE VICAR of St Breock, a parish just outside Wadebridge in Cornwall, received a letter from his bishop, John Grandisson. For a parish priest this would not have been an especially common occurrence, and its arrival may have unnerved him. A letter from the bishop meant that something was afoot: perhaps some sought-for favour had been granted or, as was the case in this instance, unwelcome trouble was brewing. The letter had been written at Clyst, one of the bishop's residences, and was dated 22 June. It read:

On behalf of some of your parishioners who have sent us an irritable petition intimating that you, against the custom long observed in the said parish regarding the payment of mortuaries, have rashly and without cause molested and unsettled them: not wishing to fail in the defence of the rights of these parishioners, our tenants, we order and exhort you to desist from all molestation, introducing no novelty until we shall be fully informed about the matter by some trustworthy men unsuspected by either party. Otherwise, we are not able to lie, we shall use whatever lawful ways and means we may to ensure that the injury done to them by you is stopped, and corrected according to the exigencies of the law.¹

The vicar of St Breock cannot have remained unruffled by this threatening message. Bishop Grandisson was a powerful man, not only in the church, but also among the landed elite of the West Country and of the kingdom.² His appointment as bishop had taken place only the previous August, and this angry fulmination arrived in St Breock even before he had been enthroned in Exeter cathedral. The unfortunate vicar's existence was about to be disrupted by a bishop making a statement about episcopal power.

We know about the message because Grandisson, following the common practice of most English bishops since the middle of the thirteenth century, made copies of all his outgoing correspondence in a register. Bishops' registers are full of similar letters, taking an interest in the conduct and income of the local clergy, haranguing them, insisting that they change their ways: this was the daily grind of administering a diocese. There was a certain amount of idealism in play, with grand references to ancient customs, rights, and the law, but the bishop was also acting in his own interests. He was the lord of a manor within the parish of St Breock, benefitting from his control of some of the land and labour there, and the parishioners had complained to him in this dual capacity. What was the substance of their grievance? The vicar appears to have been collecting ‘mortuaries’ from the parishioners, which were payments to the parish church from the goods of deceased relatives, ostensibly in lieu of tithes unpaid during life. It was normal for these payments to be made to the rector of a church, the priest who possessed the ‘benefice’ or living, but St Breock was served by a vicar, in other words a deputy (from the Latin vice). The rector had been given leave of absence to study, and his deputy was almost certainly trying to make his salary go further by claiming the mortuaries.³ It is hard to say exactly why the parishioners were upset, but most likely they feared being asked to pay twice (to the rector as well as the vicar), or even three times (to their lord the bishop as well, in the form of a ‘heriot’ or secular death duty). Although England in 1328 was recovering from the famines that had struck between 1315 and 1322, and the ‘great pestilence’ was twenty years away, clergy and peasantry alike were always keen to protect their means of subsistence.

Grandisson for his part rarely did things by halves, and the rumbling menace of this letter is rather typical. It exudes the self-assurance of power with its evocation of the force of the law, the rights of his tenants, and the ancient customs of the parish. It is also a missive acutely aware of the impact it seeks to make, namely the arrival of awesome secular and spiritual power in the small world of a Cornish parish. And yet its actual substance reveals a very different power dynamic. The bishop was not able to act in as summary and decisive a fashion as his rhetoric implies he might have wished. He had heard a complaint and he feared his interests might be compromised, but he did not know the local context, and he had not heard all sides of the story. Instead he had to postpone his pursuit of the ‘exigencies of the law’ until he had heard from ‘some trustworthy men unsuspected by either party’. Who were these people? What did they do? Why did bishops need them?

The answers to these questions will unfold in many directions in this book, until they have extended so far as to demonstrate the need for a complete reconceptualization of the medieval church. In short, the ‘trustworthy men’ (in Latin virī fidedigni, literally ‘men worthy of faith’) were predominantly lay (that is to say nonclerical) witnesses and jurors who made the medieval church what it was between about 1200 and about 1500. In 1200 the adjective fidedignum was already an old word, used in the first millennium to refer to the gospels and their authors, some saints, and other holy men, and in the eleventh and twelfth centuries to refer to living informants by historians and collectors of miracle stories. But it did not yet form part of the discourse of church administration, and was notably absent from the vocabulary of Gratian, the twelfth century's most influential legal writer.⁴

Some clues as to their role and importance are contained in Grandisson's letter, and much of the evidence on which the ensuing interpretation is based comes from thousands of similar documents recorded in the registers of scores of bishops from across England between the thirteenth and the fifteenth centuries. The challenges of governing a church are revealed in Grandisson's language. We can perceive a tension between 'long observed' custom and the 'novelties' brought about by trying to make a living. At first glance custom is being praised and novelty denigrated, but a bishop's role and intellectual formation suggest something more ambiguous. He would have seen himself as both the guardian of a stable and well-ordered creation, and as the reformer of a fallen humanity and the builder of a church. Grandisson's recorded deeds show him adopting both personae. The power that bishops wielded in pursuit of these conceptual contradictions was both spiritual and temporal, deriving from their status within a hierarchy and their possession of frequently enormous landed wealth. But this did not mean they could act alone, and it was both in order to promote reform and to arrest change that bishops sought out allies in the parishes. They could not operate without such knowledge of local realities as only the locals could provide. And that is the dynamic that I shall explore in this book. It was a relationship that made the church.

The importance of the relationship between 'trustworthy men' or virifidedigni, on the one hand, and bishops, on the other, is further indicated by the pattern of communication implied in Grandisson's letter. In it we see that parishioners petitioned the bishop and he responded by writing to the offending priest, saying that information would be gathered from 'trustworthy men', and that action would follow. There would also have been a report from this panel of adjudicators, and other stages of consultation and documentation, which survive less often, may have been undertaken. We can begin to see that governing a church was not simply a question of how forcefully a bishop could proclaim his authority. Even an expression as forceful as this letter had to acknowledge the gulf that separated the bishop from his subjects, and his reliance upon judgements other than his own. Furthermore, the requirement that his informants should be not only trustworthy but also 'unsuspected' hints at a nagging doubt about involving laypeople in the business of rule. These are all themes whose significance I will explore in the coming pages. Reading such letters at face value might encourage a view that the late medieval church was composed of institutions at two very different and separate levels: the diocese and the parish. But as this brief dissection of just one example has shown, to do so would be to miss the real location of institutional dynamism, which was in the communication and interaction between the two.

The institutional history of the medieval church has become something of a poor relation within the wider historical discipline in recent decades, despite, or perhaps because of, its importance to the origins of professional historiography in so many European countries. My purpose in this book is not to make a plea for the restoration of the sort of ecclesiastical history that dominated the nineteenth and twentieth centuries. The legacy of that tradition, in describing organizational structures and the emergence of offices and record-keeping procedures, as well as in editing documents, retains enormous value in its own right, but its potential to inform the history of a living social world is limited.⁵ The medieval church has been much described, but its existence and character little analysed.⁶

In reaction to the traditions of ecclesiastical history the past forty years have seen historians turn in droves to the study of lived religion as a changing, dynamic, varied, and above all human phenomenon. Influenced by the anthropology of religion and often conducted across the divisions between formal academic disciplines, this movement in historiography has sought to understand religious experience in terms of gender, age, status, language community, devotional preference, identification with particular saints or cults, and a host of subtle individual negotiations of the boundaries between heresy and orthodoxy. In this movement the subjectivity of experience has been a touchstone for authenticity, and the individual Christian—rather than ‘the church’ as an institution—has become the primary focus of enquiry.⁷ During this time the practice of ecclesiastical history has continued, but it has not responded as much as it might to the questions and methods that characterize the history of religion. As a result the ‘institutional church’ tends to feature most often as a backdrop to the stage upon which more exciting historical questions are addressed. But this need not be so. A wholly new set of questions can be asked of the ‘institutional church’ if we just change our perspective, and thinking about that letter to the vicar of St Breock in 1328 has shown us what some of these might be.

What I propose here is a new sort of institutional history, one that could be summed up in the phrase ‘a social church’.⁸ This is a history that treats as inseparable the influence of actions and phenomena usually studied disjointedly as religious, social, cultural, political, economic, and institutional history; it is a history in which the impact and effects of institutional action are essential to explanations of its nature and meaning. As well as being an amalgam of clergy, bishops, law, and formal institutions, the church was simultaneously an identity, something to which people felt they belonged, and an endlessly shifting constellation of real relationships: their belief, belonging, and identity experienced in relation to specific people. Because the church meant all these things, it makes little sense for historians to study the institutions, the identity, the belief, the belonging, and their socioeconomic situation as if they were not all mutually constitutive. The starting point for analysis, suggested by the example from early fourteenth-century Cornwall, is the observation that in deciding upon obligations arising from membership of a parish and the passage from life to death, neither the parishioners nor the bishop possessed the capacity to effect change on their own. Each appealed to the other for assistance, making plain their symbiosis and mutual historical development. We might say that both the character of life in the parish and the bishop's government of his diocese were formed by the interaction between the two. The clergy, though they were often central to the lives of parishes and the work of dioceses, found themselves caught in the middle of this alliance between bishops and 'trustworthy men.' Thinking of parishes and bishops as part of a 'social church' therefore necessitates a more expansive definition of 'institutions', seeing them more as the sum of multiple actions and habits of thought rather than simply as organizational structures. It is an approach heavily influenced by the sociology of interaction, which sees repeated patterns of human connection as the building blocks of all social phenomena, by the so-called 'new institutional economics', which interprets individual transactions as constitutive of (and not just reactions to) the 'rules of the game', and by feminist history writing, which sees patriarchy as a dispersed and adaptable institution without any single definitive location.⁹ The ways in which this scholarship has affected my thinking will become apparent in the following chapters.

I will pursue this new history of the church by putting the 'trustworthy men' centre stage as the vector for communication between bishops and parishes, the site where processes of mutual formation affected both institutions. There will be two distinct, and yet closely connected, strands to my investigation. First, to take a cue from the keyword itself, the fidedigni: trustworthy people or people worthy of faith. What was the faith, the fides, of which they were worthy? What relation did it have to the faith that all Christians were supposed to have in God? What did it owe to legal conceptions of good faith, or feudal ideas about fidelity? How was it connected with the confidence essential to the conduct of everyday life? Why was this name used, especially when other terms were available to describe local collaborators with governmental power, as we shall see in Chapter 4? What were its connotations, and what meanings of faith—such a ubiquitous and malleable word in medieval culture—did it incorporate? Second, bearing in mind the distinction that Bishop Grandisson was careful to make between 'some . . . parishioners' and 'some trustworthy men', how did the act of discrimination inherent in trusting affect both parish society and the bishop's government of his diocese? Calling some people trustworthy was a choice with real social consequences. Who could be trustworthy in the bishop's eyes? Because the trustworthy men were living people, and not just a figure of speech, such questions have to do with material inequality, and I will ask how a bishop's attributions of trustworthiness (and by implication untrustworthiness) intersected with the multiple existing inequalities of life. Did the concept and the sociology of the 'trustworthy men' merely echo constructions of gender difference and the facts of social stratification, or did they in turn affect those fundamental aspects of life? The faith that made the church was the trust placed in these men; the inequality that made the church was the social status that enabled them to be trusted.

It is fair to say that beyond a community of specialist scholars the medieval church has not enjoyed the academic attention that its interest and importance merits. To some extent this is because it is church history, but the fact of it being medieval history has also played a part. Medieval history is so often assumed to be irrelevant to broader historical concerns. Yet, as a phenomenon in global history, the medieval church is of considerable significance, being the complex institutional expression of a major world religion at a crucial time. It is worthy of study in its own right, but also as something amenable to comparison with other religious institutions or other governing systems. Indeed, by engaging critically with the massive and varied scholarly literature on trust in disciplines as diverse as economics and the philosophy of science, I hope that study of the medieval church can not only be enriched in itself, but also make a contribution to other fields of enquiry. Indeed a medievalist's perspective on the study of trust immediately disrupts a whole series of complacent assumptions about 'modernity' that have come to dominate thinking in the social sciences, and by coupling the study of trust with the interrogation of inequality, it is also possible to confound some of the more developmental and celebratory accounts of 'Western' history.

In order to reframe this study of the medieval church, each of the four parts of the book begins with a short introduction situating the discussion within the scholarly literature on trust, inequality, and a number of related topics. The chapters in Part I examine three components in the late medieval culture of trust, namely belief in God (Chapter 1), trust and promises (Chapter 2), and faith as an element in personal identity and reputation (Chapter 3). All of these fed into the contemporary meaning of fides; they had their distinct histories and implications, but they also overlapped with one another in conscious and unconscious ways. Part II identifies the trustworthy men, beginning with their emergence as a feature of ecclesiastical rhetoric in the twelfth and thirteenth centuries (Chapter 4), and the impressions that bishops had of them as collaborators with episcopal power (Chapter 5), before looking in detail at the identities, social status, and economic position of named trustworthy men (Chapter 6). The conclusions of these chapters then contribute to a discussion of faith and inequality in the parish in Part III, looking first at the ways in which trustworthy men could and could not be said to have represented their communities (Chapter 7). Inequality is revealed as fundamental to the church's reliance upon so-called trustworthy men, and I show (in Chapter 8) how the impact of this was felt differently in changing conditions between about 1250 and about 1500, in the varied landscapes of England and the wider British Isles. Discussion of faith and inequality is concluded with an intimate history of life lived alongside the trustworthy men (Chapter 9), where the social capital accrued from collaborating with bishops is shown to have been a major contributor to enduring, and worsening, social inequalities. In Part IV the relationship between parish and diocese is looked at in detail from the bishop's perspective, describing the ways in which bishops thought about knowledge and testimony when dealing with hundreds of people they did not know and of whose motives they were suspicious (Chapter 10), before examining three areas in which the trustworthy men made the power of bishops what it was. These are the management of financial transactions of various kinds (Chapter 11), coping with change in the material world (Chapter 12), and probing relationships through subtle judgements about character, intentions, and belief (Chapter 13). In all of this we will see bishops gaining power by commodifying social relations for their institutional benefit. This leads to a discussion of the role of information and trust in shaping the late medieval church (Chapter 14).

Finally, before launching into the enquiry proper, it is worth pointing out what I am not doing in this book. In arguing that the church was made by faith and inequality, the two principal attributes of the 'trustworthy men', I may risk giving the impression that I am resuscitating two corpses of historical prejudice. One is that the medieval centuries were an 'age of faith', a naïve view of the period as a time of unquestioning faith, which has been inflected as credulity or piety depending on the writer's point of view. This position was attacked in the 1970s by historians who argued that Christianity was never more than a thin veneer of elite culture prior to the sixteenth century, and in some cases beyond. However, that revisionism was equally condescending towards the majority, who were cast as the bearers of folkloric traditions, their capacity for engaging with cognitive belief implicitly denied.¹⁰ In opposition to both these approaches, I assume that faith was such a pervasive and multifarious concept affecting so many areas of life, that there was no-one who did not experience it and think with it in some fashion, but also that no two people had precisely the same conception of faith. Faith certainly made the church, but not in the way you might think. Equally, the European Middle Ages, and especially the medieval church, are frequently bywords for intolerance and ideological control, so my assertion that inequality also made the church could be mistaken for a rather totalitarian view of ecclesiastical power.¹¹ On the contrary, feeling like a member of the church did not depend upon the coercive power of bishops or inquisitors, and one of the leading arguments of this book is that ideas about belonging and belief were formed at every location within the 'social church', though especially where people of different social and cultural backgrounds had to negotiate one another's divergent perspectives and relative power.

INDEX

- Abbay, William, 139
Abelard, Peter, 20
Aberdeen, diocese of, 218–19
accountability, 97–98, 115, 182, 200, 257–58, 292
Acton, John, 21
advance purchase sale, 37, 44, 58
adverse selection, 341
advowson. See patrons of churches
affeerors, 57, 131, 139–40
Agen (France), 29, 102
Aquinas, Thomas, 19–20, 25
Alexander II of Scotland, 101
Alexander III (pope), 107
Alfonso X of Castile, 97
alms-collectors, 108, 205, 218, 271–73
altruism, 35, 59, 292
anchorites and hermits, 31, 319–20, 324
Anselm of Bec (and of Canterbury), 19, 76 apprenticeships, 38
arbitration, 48, 53, 56–57, 60–1, 100, 218–19, 300
Aristotle, 20, 75, 116, 287
Armagh, archbishops of, 218
Arnold, John, 25
Articles of the Clerics (1316), 242
Arundel, Thomas (archbishop of Canterbury), 328
Ashby, George, 110
assarts, 211, 294, 296
Asserio, Rigaud (bishop of Winchester), 279 assumpsit, 36, 368n31. See also contracts atheism, 25. See also doubt Atte Mede family (Southwick, Hampshire), 196–98
Augustine of Hippo, Saint, 17–18, 21, 26–27, 30, 33, 46, 63–64, 67, 74–76, 86, 93, 99, 105–6, 113, 321–22, 361n42
Azo, 49

Balbus, Johannes, 27
Baldwin of Ford, 20
banks, 92, 122, 127, 381n1

baptism, 29, 42, 301–3
Bartley, Ken (England on the Eve of the Black Death), 145, 149–51, 176, 181
Bath and Wells, diocese of, 107, 118, 207, 259, 319. See also Bitton, William; Bubwith, Nicholas; Drokensford, John de; Shrewsbury, Ralph de; Stafford, John Beckerman, John, 208
Becket, Thomas (archbishop of Canterbury), 107, 313
Bede, 105–6
Bedfordshire, 149–52, 225, 289, 310, 320 belief, as circumspection, 261–63. See also faith: in God believers, 24, 30; defined by inquisitors, 359n9
Benedict XII (pope; Jacques Fournier), 123
benefices, 2, 134, 242, 247, 277–82, 288–94, 312, 323; leases of, 235; unions of, 188, 249, 280, 297, 335; valuations of, 259, 280, 282, 285. See also parish churches; parishes; patrons of churches benefit of clergy, 211, 314–16, 324, 333
Bennett, Judith, 229
Benveniste, Emile, 101
Berkshire, 250, 276, 339
Bernard of Angers, 110
Bernard of Clairvaux, 19
Bernard of Pavia, 108
Bethune, Robert de (bishop of Hereford), 342
betrothal. See marriage; troth
Biddick, Kathleen, 225
Biel, Gabriel, 20
Biller, Peter, 364n90
bishops: and the nobility, 125, 249–50; power and authority of, 241–43, 249–50, 264–65, 267–68, 272, 275, 278, 284, 285–86, 295, 299–300, 307, 313, 329, 331–47, 349; registers and records of, 1–3, 202, 214–15, 269–70, 333, 337. See also names of individual bishops

- Bisson, Tom, 97–99
Bitton, William (bishop of Bath and Wells), 274
Black Death. See plague
Blair, John, 304
Blandford Forum (Dorset), 138, 153–55, 189–90, 213, 225
Bloch, Marc, 48
Blundeville, Thomas (bishop of Norwich), 295
Blyth (Nottinghamshire), 144–48, 187, 203, 343 body, the, 287
Bonaventure, 20
bonds, 40, 57, 312
Boniface (archbishop of Canterbury), 311
boni homines, 100–2
Boreau, Alain, 260
borrow. See wed and borrow Bowet, Henry (archbishop of York), 324
Bowman, Alan, 346
Brabourn, Thomas (of Faversham, Kent), 66, 69, 76
'Bracton,' 49, 103, 254, 264
Bransford, Wolstan de (bishop of Worcester), 124
Brantyngham, Thomas (bishop of Exeter), 275, 327
Braudel, Fernand, 210, 213 breach of faith, 36–40, 43–44, 46, 54, 60, 86–87, 116, 222, 237 bribery, 61
Briggs, Chris, 54–55
Bristol, 164
Bubwith, Nicholas (bishop of Bath and Wells), 207
Buckingham, John (bishop of Lincoln), 277
Buckinghamshire, 57–58, 135, 140, 281, 299
Burgess, Clive, 164
burial, 286, 299–304, 322–23
Burrow, John, 49
Bynum, Caroline Walker, 287–88, 290

Cairo Geniza, 380n92
Cambridgeshire, 125, 140, 165, 186, 231, 297, 319–20, 435n30
Campbell, Bruce M. (England on the Eve of the Black Death), 145, 149–51, 176, 181 canon law, 43, 77, 98, 107–8, 114, 212, 251–53, 303, 314, 317, 390n85

Canterbury, diocese of, 49, 69, 86, 108, 116, 120, 233, 255. See also Arundel, Thomas; Becket, Thomas; Boniface; Courtenay, William; Langton, Stephen; Pecham, John; Stratford, John; Winchelsey, Robert of Cantilupe, Walter de (bishop of Worcester), 256
Carlisle, diocese of, 80, 186, 211–12, 272–73, 282. See also Halton, John; Kirkby, John Cassiodorus, 106
cathedral chapters, 276–78
cemeteries. See churchyards Chancery, court of, 115
change, attitudes towards, 3, 73, 286–87, 290, 295–96. See also dilapidation chantries, 214–16, 236, 338, 345 chapels, 135, 282, 297, 299–300, 304–5, 334, 342, 345, 432n74 charity, 208, 225, 234–35, 268, 291, 311
Charlton, Lewis (bishop of Hereford), 87
charters, 342
The Chastising of God's Children, 72
Chatton, Walter, 252
Chaucer, Geoffrey, 42, 49–50, 69, 72–73, 80, 86, 227, 233, 258, 309
Cheshire, 65, 195, 210
chests (and locks and keys), in parish churches, 272–73 church courts, 33, 35–38, 41, 43, 48, 50, 54, 57, 60, 77, 83, 211, 222–23, 225, 229, 236–37, 242, 254, 257, 262, 273, 275, 312–14, 316, 323, 329 churchwardens, 38–39, 59, 164–66, 169, 183–84, 186, 208, 213, 225, 235, 241; female, 169, 229–30 churchyards, 129, 195, 286, 289, 299, 303, 316
Cicero, 361n42
Circumspecte agatis (1286), 242, 313
Clanchy, Michael, 96, 227
Clavill, William, 190–3, 206, 225 clerical subsidies, 269–70, 281
coadjutors, 282–84, 323
Cobham, Thomas (bishop of Worcester), 110 coercion, 52–53, 55, 58, 84, 87, 100 coin, scarcity of, 38
Coleman, James, 37, 54, 201

- commodification (of social relations), 241, 284, 308, 318–19, 327, 352
- common good, 98, 193
- common land, 193
- common law (English), 34, 36, 38, 57, 60, 257, 264, 273, 280, 314–15, 323
- community of the faithful, 28–31, 221–22, 324, 352
- compurgation, 53, 118, 231–32, 258, 318–19, 329, 334, 389n80
- confession, 28, 87, 237, 244, 313, 317, 322, 326, 340, 344
- conscience, 43
- consensus, 127, 346
- consent, 41, 43, 47, 52, 66, 70, 370n89
- Constance, Council of, 20
- constancy, 31, 113, 117, 119, 123, 241, 315, 324
- contracts, 13, 28–29, 37, 46, 51, 368n31.
See also assumpsit
- contrition, 322
- convocation, 257, 269
- covenants, 30, 36
- Corbridge, Thomas (archbishop of York), 257, 343
- Cornwall, 1–2, 138, 249, 276, 325
- corrodies, 197
- Courtenay, William (archbishop of Canterbury), 122–23
- Coventry and Lichfield, diocese of, 118, 195, 207, 292, 339. See also Northburgh, Roger; Stavensby, Alexander
- credit and debt, 28–29, 34–37, 39, 42–43, 45–46, 49, 51, 54–55, 57, 60, 79, 86, 139–40, 148, 151, 154, 190, 194, 198, 206, 216, 221, 225, 229, 237, 274–75, 279, 311, 369n64. See also advance purchase sale; credit sale; micro-credit; reciprocity
- credit sale, 37
- Creed, the, 17–18, 21, 23–24, 29, 261–62
- crime, 307, 313–18
- Cumbria, 282, 303
- custom, 1–3, 52–53, 59, 75, 134, 136, 164, 189, 198, 211–12, 252, 256, 263, 287, 294–95, 302, 305, 320
- Davies, Rees, 80
- Davis, James, 49
- d'Avray, David, 352
- deathbed property transfers, 39
- debt. See credit and debt
- De Certeau, Michel, 16–17, 304
- Decretals* (of Gregory IX), 21, 98, 108, 254
- defamation, 53, 65, 77–80, 83, 121, 126, 186, 228, 236, 317, 319, 344
- Dent (Yorkshire), 129–31, 139, 412n47
- Derbyshire, 39, 210, 269, 283–84, 292, 339
- Dispenser, Henry (bishop of Norwich), 272
- Devon, 137–38, 141, 164–65, 175, 209, 230, 274, 296, 301–3, 314
- DeWindt, Edwin, 55
- dilapidation (of church property), 123, 191, 206, 290–94
- dispute settlement, 53, 247–48, 250, 295, 300, 306, 336. See also arbitration
- distrust, 221, 250–1, 277. See also untrustworthiness
- divorce, 82, 124, 126. See also marriage: annulment of The Doctrine of the Hert, 72
- Domesday Book, 332
- domestic violence and cruelty, 40, 126–27, 317
- Dorset, 121–22, 136–37, 139, 144–48, 153–55, 186, 189–93, 198, 206, 213, 225–27
- doubt, 25, 29, 75, 99, 260–1, 284, 297, 306, 324, 332–33, 335–36, 340; and doubting Thomas, 25; about God, 25, 94; and John the Baptist, 19; about people, 3, 94
- Drokensford, John de (bishop of Bath and Wells), 342
- Duffy, Eamon, 182, 357n15
- Durandus, William, 256
- Durham, County, 80, 134, 164, 254, 293, 296, 310; diocese of, 80, 117, 232, 319, see also Fox, Richard; Poore, Richard
- Durkheim, Émile, 11–12
- Dyer, Chris, 163, 194, 206, 236
- Eaton Bray (Bedfordshire), 149–52, 310
- Edmund of Abingdon (archbishop of Canterbury), 260
- Edward I of England, 80, 103, 217, 257–58, 332
- Edward II of England, 326

- Edward III of England, 242
Edward IV of England, 133
Eldevik, John, 295
Elias (bishop of Llandaff), 219
Ely, diocese of, 81, 125, 231, 255, 260. See also Grey, William
'emunah, 30
equity, 28, 31, 34, 101
Essex, 38–39, 134, 223, 276, 295
Eucharist, the, 86, 311, 326 excommunication, 31, 43, 45, 115, 121, 192, 195, 322, 341, 345 executors, 39, 55, 226, 273–75. See also wills Exeter, diocese of, 1, 125, 134–35, 138, 207, 255–56, 282, 292, 323, 339. See also Brantyngham, Thomas; Grandisson, John; Lacy, Edmund; Quinel, Peter eyre, 103
- faith: articles of the, 16, 18, 21–23, 27, 243, 327, 340 (see also Creed, the); in the church, 17, 23–24, 26, 28–29, 262; connections between secular and religious, 28, 30, 32–34, 40, 64, 67–68, 73–74, 76, 91, 219, 222, 251; and emotion, 22, 71, 287–88 (see also trust: and emotion); enemies of the, 23; epistemology of, 18–21, 22, 24–27, 32, 67; the faith, 28–29, 31, 103–4, 284, 332; fragility of, 84, 233, 260–1; giving, 36, 44–46, 49, 60, 65, 222, 315 (see also marriage; pledging; troth); in God, 12, 23, 27, 222, 238, 270, 306, 321, 325, 329, 359n12; and grace, 20, 73; hand gestures of, 44, 47–51, 56, 61, 66–67, 69–70, 84; and the heart, 63, 66–74, 123 (see also heart, eyes of the); and hope, 22; and inequality, 23–24, 26, 31, 48; and interpersonal relations, 12, 26, 28 (see also trust: interpersonal); and Jews, 30, 75, 297; and love (or charity), 22, 30; as personal attribute or possession, 46, 63, 65, 76–77, 79, 84, 88, 221; and reason, 19–20, 22, 74–75; as refuge, 364n81; rituals of interpersonal, 43, 45, 51–53, 65 (see also faith: hand gestures of; faith: and tokens); and tokens, 43, 50–1, 54; as translation of Latin fides, 17, 46, 93; and uncertainty, 297. See also breach of faith; good faith; trust Faith, Saint, 29, 110, 297 faithful, the. See community of the faithful fama, 52, 77–78, 83, 186, 196, 226, 232, 236, 251–60, 263–64, 319, 326, 332, 340, 343, 351 famine, 2, 141, 203, 296
Fasciculus Morum, 15, 19
Fawcett family (Dent and Sedbergh), 56, 130–31 fealty, 97, 100, 257. See also loyalty
fede rings, 50
Fenwick, Carolyn, 153
fidedignus. See trustworthy men fideiussores, 29, 42, 44, 54–55, 102, 273.
See also pledging
fideles, 100–1, 104, 108, 234 fides qua creditur. See faith: epistemology of fides quae creditur. See faith: articles of the fidus, 101, 104
Fiskerton (Lincolnshire), 148–52, 203
Flemings, 79
forgery, 280
Foucault, Michel, 346
Fox, Richard (bishop of Durham), 324–25 fraud, 37, 153, 192, 249, 268–69, 271–72, 274–77, 280, 284
Friesthorpe (Lincolnshire), 138, 140, 167, 173, 176, 178, 183, 237
Fyneux, John, 242
frankpledge, 198, 252
fraternities. See guilds
free will, 40, 48. See also consent French, Katherine, 183, 230
friendship, 26, 34, 63–64, 92, 352
- gage. See advance purchase sale
Gambetta, Diego, 60, 244
Gdansk (Poland), 84
Gellner, Ernest, 13, 210
gender. See misogyny; parish churches, women in; parishes: and women; patriarchy; promises and gender; trust: and gender; trust: and women; trustworthiness: and masculinity; trustworthiness: and women; women and the law

- Gerson, Jean, 20
Gervais, John (bishop of Winchester), 274
Gesta romanorum, 27, 85
ghosts, 79, 263, 327
Giffard, Walter (archbishop of York), 345
Giles of Rome, 116
Gillingham (Dorset), 121–22, 198, 213, 225
Given, James, 53
'Glanvill,' 264
Glénisson, Jean, 244
Glentham (Lincolnshire), 138, 140, 167–76, 178, 181–82, 186, 213
Gloucestershire, 281, 327, 339
godparents, 21, 29, 42, 102
Goldberg, Jeremy, 231
Good, David, 77
good faith, 26, 28, 33–36, 39, 71, 117, 162, 274, 316, 322, 332, 352
gossip, 77, 140, 226, 232, 251, 256, 316
Gower, John, 50, 227
Graeber, David, 367n21
Grandisson, John (bishop of Exeter), 1–3, 5, 123, 251, 259, 274, 276, 325
Gratian, 3, 107–8
Gray, Walter (archbishop of York), 30, 125
Gray, William (bishop of Lincoln), 289, 339
Green, Richard Firth, 12, 35, 47, 66
Greenfield, William (archbishop of York), 278, 338
Grey, William (bishop of Ely), 124
Grosseteste, Robert (bishop of Lincoln), 22, 256
guilds, 39, 58, 213–16, 231–32, 235, 241
guarantors. See fideiussores
- Hacchys, Agnes, 233
Hainton (Lincolnshire), 141, 164, 167–76, 177, 180
Halton, John (bishop of Carlisle), 80
Hamm, Berndt, 30
Hampshire, 79, 115, 136–37, 139, 141, 144, 196–98, 204, 210, 223, 232, 294
Hartlebury (Worcestershire), 39, 59, 133,
137, 165–66, 183–85, 374n149
Hatcher, John, 212–13
Hawthorn, Geoffrey, 162
heart, eyes of the, 74–76. See also faith:
and the heart
Helmholz, Richard, 116, 259
Henry II of England, 97, 102, 313
Henry III of England, 103, 125, 133, 256
Henry IV of England, 328
Henry of Langenstein, 24
Henstridge (Somerset), 149–52, 343
Hereford, city, 31, 223; diocese of, 87,
120–21, 131, 134, 207, 249, 262, 270,
297, 334, 339, see also Bethune, Robert de; Charlton, Lewis; Lacy, Edmund; Myllyng, Thomas; Orleton, Adam;
Spofford, Thomas; Swinfield, Richard;
Trillek, John; William de Vere
Herefordshire, 117, 165, 226, 283, 303, 317, 327, 343
heresy, 17, 25, 42, 122–23, 205, 212, 216, 242–43, 287, 307–8, 322, 327–29, 341, 344, 351
heriot, 2, 136
Hertfordshire, 36, 276
Hervé of Bourgdieu, 106
Higden, Ranulph, 19, 22–23, 28
Hilton, Rodney, 228
Hincmar of Laon, 106
homage, 48, 56, 257
Honorius II (pope), 109
Horton (Dorset), 144–48, 226
Hosking, Geoffrey, 12, 14, 33, 35, 61 hospitals, 103, 135, 182, 235, 252, 271–72, 277, 281, 297, 325, 338–39
Hostiensis, 37, 42
Hrabanus Maurus, 106
hue and cry, 209
Hugh of St Victor, 18–20, 24, 76, 105,
251, 296
Hundred Rolls, 332
Huntingdonshire, 31, 82, 289
Hyams, Paul, 49
- illegitimacy, 310
impartiality, 57, 61, 125, 127, 186–88, 194, 196, 242, 248–50, 281, 334, 349
information, 121, 226, 245, 261, 299, 314, 331–40, 345–47, 350; overload, 333;
stability of, 121–22, 207, 241, 247–51, 334, 343
inquests, 97–100, 103–4, 109, 114, 119, 132, 139, 187, 195, 204, 212, 236–37,
242–43, 248, 251, 254, 256–58, 281, 285, 289–90, 308, 310, 313, 337; into miracles, 113, 325–26. See also jurors and juries

- inquisition, canonical, 98–100, 253–54
inquisitions post mortem, 275
Innocent III (pope), 21
Innocent IV (pope), 260
institutional church, 275–78; historiography of, 4–5, 243 institutions, 331, 336–38, 347, 351 intersectionality, 132, 161, 199
Ireland, 217–19
Irthlingborough (Northamptonshire), 142
Iser, Wolfgang, 346
- Jacob's Well*, 72
Jager, Eric, 68–69
James I of Aragon, 99
Jauss, Hans Robert, 346
Jerome, Saint, 75
Jews. See faith: and Jews
John of Freiburg, 22
Johnson, Tom, 288–89, 293, 295
Jones, Karen, 63
jurisdictional disputes, 242, 258, 280, 291, 313–14, 316, 328, 338–39 jurors and juries, 49, 100, 104, 135, 140, 209, 215, 257–58, 262, 264, 314–15, 323 Justice, Steven, 35, 55, 62
- Kane, Bronach, 303
Karras, Ruth Mazo, 232
Kempe, John (archbishop of York), 324, 338
Kent, 37, 47, 55, 60, 66, 76, 104, 120, 139, 142–43, 165, 194, 195–96, 223, 233, 258, 294, 312, 317
Kirkbride, Alice, 126–27
Kirkby, John (bishop of Carlisle), 126–27, 211
Koyama, Mark, 54–55
Knights Templar, 327, 364n90
knowledge: instinctive, 222, 224, 228; local, 99, 118, 122, 204–5, 296, 309, 320, 332, 336, 340–46, 349; probable, 254, 336; scientific, 443n54; sociology of, 346; technical, 118, 138, 293. See also fama; information; testimony
Kowaleski, Maryanne, 56
Kuhn, Thomas, 261
Kümin, Beat, 166
- Lacy, Edmund (bishop of Exeter and Hereford), 259, 315
Lancelot, 49
landscape, 136, 147–48, 153, 176–82, 204, 296, 298–99, 303; Christian, 288, 304; upland, 209–13, 217, 219–20, 297, 303
Langland, William (The Vision of Piers Plowman), 22, 27, 80
Langton, Stephen (archbishop of Canterbury), 108, 271, 309
Lateran Council: Second (1139), 289; Fourth (1215), 21, 28, 30, 104, 107–8, 320, 341
Laurence of Spain, 29
Law, John, 350
lay subsidies, 103, 148–52, 176, 182
legali homines, 100, 102
Leicester, 122–23, 213, 216, 344
Leicestershire, 115, 179, 328, 344
Lichfield, 59, 262
Lincoln, diocese of, 31, 103, 115, 142, 188, 254, 320, 322. See also Buckingham, John; Gray, William; Grosseteste, Robert; Repingdon, Philip; Sutton, Oliver Lincolnshire, 118, 138, 140–1, 148–52, 156, 164, 167–83, 186–87, 199, 203, 210, 213, 237, 249, 281, 303, 329 living standards, 227
lollards. See Wycliffites
London, 38, 41, 44, 47, 50, 65, 70, 78, 80–3, 86, 117, 124, 164, 226, 228–29, 233, 271, 292; Council of, 341; guild-hall, 51, 79 lordship, 56, 136, 176, 179–81, 187–88, 192, 209, 297–98, 300 lots, casting, 211–12
Louis IX of France, 97
loyalty, 81, 104
Luhmann, Niklas, 63, 91–92, 336
Lydgate, John, 50, 230
lying, 43
Lyndwood, William, 28, 259, 341
Lyons, Second Council of, 274
- Maddern, Philippa, 70
Maitland, Frederic, 43–44, 48, 222
Malory, Thomas, 50, 85

- Mannyng of Brunne, Robert, 87 manor courts, 36, 40, 53–54, 56–57, 77, 136–37, 189, 198, 225, 229, 257, 273, 376n184
markets, 31, 46, 48–50, 147, 225, 236, 369n57. See also trust: and economic exchange
marriage, 28, 35, 41–43, 45–48, 50–1, 65, 79, 88, 108, 124–25, 223, 226, 231,
233, 260, 263, 310, 316, 320, 339–40; annulment of, 39, 115, 321 (see also divorce); dispensation from prohibitions on, 52, 124, 321
Martival, Roger (bishop of Salisbury), 326
Marx, Karl, 334, 347
McIntosh, Marjorie, 209
Melton, William (archbishop of York), 119, 211, 260, 264, 334
memory, 35, 43, 50–2, 129, 280, 286–87, 292–93, 295, 302–3, 340, 343–45,
347, 439n1
mental illness and incapacity, 283, 307, 323–26
micro-credit, 55, 235
Middlesex, 276, 295
middling sort, 132, 156
Miller, Edward, 212–13
Miller, Maureen, 289
Mirk, John, 17–18, 21–22, 237–38
misogyny, 134, 230, 233–34
Misztal, Barbara, 12
monasteries. See religious houses monks as trustworthy men, 107–8, 269–70
Montacute, Simon (bishop of Worcester), 216
Moore, R. I. (Bob), 96
moral hazard, 341
Moray, diocese of, 218
Morebath (Devon), 165, 182–83, 209
More, Joan (of Milton, Kent), 66–67, 69, 76
Morgan, Teresa, 30, 92
mortuaries, 2, 39, 195, 301
mortmain, 197
Muldrew, Craig, 13, 35
municipal (borough) courts, 36, 51, 209
murder, 314–15, 333
Myllyng, Thomas (bishop of Hereford),
280
Needham, Rodney, 16
neighbours, 118, 122, 131, 134, 186, 198, 221, 224–26, 233, 237–38, 297, 304,
317–19, 329, 339, 342, 344, 352
Newark (Nottinghamshire), 213–16
Noah, 19
Norfolk, 39, 57, 60, 78, 81, 215, 339
North, Douglass, 336
Northburgh, Roger (bishop of Coventry and Lichfield), 283
Northamptonshire, 142, 188, 229, 339
North Newton (Somerset), 207–8, 272
Northumberland, 134, 186, 218, 231
Norwich, diocese of, 46, 60, 80, 86, 138, 140, 275, 297. See also Blundeville,
Thomas; Dispenser, Henry
notoriety, 253–54, 264
Nottinghamshire, 37, 118, 144–48, 187,
203, 213–15, 280, 296–97, 334, 343, 345
nudum pactum, 43–44
oaths, 38, 42–46, 48–49, 97, 107, 124, 244, 256–59, 271, 283, 297, 387n53;
on books, 42, 44, 48, 50
Ockham, William, 20, 252
Ogilvie, Sheilagh, 162, 224, 351
Oldcastle, John, 328
Olson, Sheri, 188
The Orchard of Syon, 73
ordeals, 257
Ordinary Gloss (to the Bible), 19, 105
Ordinary Gloss (to the Decretals), 109 Orleton, Adam (bishop of Worcester and Hereford), 260
Ottobono (papal legate), 274
Oxford, Council of, 341
Oxfordshire, 61, 250
parish churches: appropriation of, 252, 281, 295; consecration of, 289, 316;
fabric of, 208, 226, 286, 288–93, 304, 328, 340, 420n17 (see also dilapidation); vacancy of, 218, 254, 280;
women in, 226
parish clergy, 2, 87, 186, 235–36, 247, 253, 271–72, 274, 278–84, 290, 298, 308–13, 334–35, 340–41; as arbitrators, 57; bodies of, 310; education

- parish clergy (continued) of, 309, 311, 434n10; income of, 227, 248, 299; infirmities of, 282–84 (see also mental illness); and intellectual faith, 362n53; personal qualities of, 307, 309–10, 434n10; and visitation, 194–95, 262–63, 309
- parish priest. See parish clergy
- parishes: boundaries of, 257, 287, 294, 296–306; equality and hierarchy in, 137, 166–67, 169, 172–82, 194, 199, 206, 220; leadership in, 164–85, 199–200 (see also churchwardens); and women, 171. See also benefices
- Passion of Sainte Foy*, 29. See also Faith, Saint
- Paston family, 37, 46, 67, 70
- pastoral care, 21, 279, 281–83, 312
- pastoral theology, 21, 24–25
- patriarchy, 5, 161, 234–38
- patrons of churches, 125–26, 151, 188, 216, 236, 247, 272, 278–82, 284, 286, 290, 298, 309, 334–35
- Paul, Saint, 17, 22–23, 30, 75–76, 84, 105, 134
- Paulina (correspondent of Augustine), 74
- Paull, William, 28, 339
- peasants' revolt of 1381, 55
- Pecham, John (archbishop of Canterbury), 260
- Pecock, Reginald, 359n11, 363n58
- Pembrokeshire, 218–19
- penance, 119, 121, 123, 129, 131, 222, 319, 322
- perfidy, 80
- perjury, 43–44, 79, 82, 115, 117. See also breach of faith
- Peter Lombard, 20, 24, 30, 105
- Peter the Venerable, 106–7
- Philip II (Augustus) of France, 99, 102
- Pillius, 108
- Pimsler, Martin, 56
- pistis*, 30
- plague, 2, 56, 203–4, 220, 227, 243, 368n31, 394n29
- pledging, 34, 40, 46, 53–56, 58–59, 131, 222
- Polanyi, Karl, 11
- Polanyi, Michael, 261, 346
- poll taxes, 148, 152–55
- pollution (of churchyards by bloodshed, animals, or sex), 134, 195, 205, 233, 289, 316, 420n17
- Pontoise, John (bishop of Winchester), 252
- Poor Law, 236
- Poore, Richard (bishop of Salisbury and Durham), 271
- Postles, David, 56
- preaching and sermons, 205, 222, 226, 340
- prebends, 278, 296–97, 338
- probi homines*, 100, 102–3. See also prudeshommes
- promises, 12, 28–30, 34, 35–62, 66, 222, 257, 261, 319; a Christian's duty to keep, 37, 42–43, 45 (see also nudum pactum); defective, 66; in fiction, 42, 46–47, 49–50; and gender, 229; implied, 41; informal, 43–44; registers of speech in making, 41–42, 45, 47
- proof, 28, 34, 251–59, 264
- Provero, Luigi, 295
- prudeshommes*, 102, 137
- Quinel, Peter (bishop of Exeter), 23, 309, 311
- Quinque verba*, 22
- rape, 65, 79, 218, 233
- rationality, 11, 34, 48, 54, 72, 74–76, 82, 97, 106, 212, 214, 229–30, 235, 244, 259, 300, 305, 323, 335–36, 351; bounded, 346. See also faith: and reason
- reciprocity, 37, 44, 53–54, 80, 197, 283, 352
- rectories. See benefices
- Rede, Robert (bishop of Chichester), 124, 277
- Reemtsma, Jan Philipp, 11–12, 33, 65, 84, 238
- religion, study of, 4, 7, 31, 287
- religious houses, 55, 187–88, 337, 339, 342–43
- Rentz, Ellen, 166
- Repington, Philip (bishop of Lincoln), 328
- reputation, 64, 76–83, 109, 222, 229, 237–38, 277, 284, 309, 316–19, 324, 327, 332, 340, 345; and pride, 237. See also fama

- Reyerson, Kathryn, 84
Reynolds, Walter (bishop of Worcester), 336
Ripon, 182–83, 337
risk, 54–55, 57, 71, 84, 92, 114, 335–36
Roman law, 28, 33–34, 43, 54, 77, 98, 107
Romeyn, John (archbishop of York), 119–20, 338
Rosenthal, Joel, 135
Rosenwein, Barbara, 67
Rosser, Gervase, 58, 235
rumour, 77–78, 83, 251, 255–56, 280
Rutland, 165, 235
- Sabapathy, John, 98
sale, law of, 36, 48, 51
Salisbury, 138, 213, 215; diocese of, 117–18, 121, 228, 231, 248, 250, 275, 339, see also Martival, Roger; Poore, Richard; Waltham, John Sandale, John (bishop of Winchester), 123 sanctioning community, 56
sanctuary, 315–16, 337
satisfaction, canonical principle of, 36, 39
Schofield, Phillipp, 194, 206, 208
Scotland and Scots, 79–81, 101–2, 117, 217–19, 264
Scott, James, 210
Scredington (Lincolnshire), 138, 167–76, 177, 180
Scrope, Richard (archbishop of York), 214, 297
Searby (Lincolnshire), 141, 167–76, 178, 180–1
Seligman, Adam, 11–12
Sen, Amartya, 132, 161
servants, 115, 120, 133, 156, 171, 182, 206–7, 215, 230, 236, 291, 302 sexual morality, 59, 195–96, 198, 223, 226, 231–33, 253, 262, 310–11, 313, 316–17, 319, 328 shame, 47, 58, 77, 129, 323
Shapin, Steven, 346
Shrewsbury, Ralph de (bishop of Bath and Wells), 342
Shropshire, 134, 137, 186, 262–63, 270, 280, 297, 301, 334 sight, 76, 252, 260, 282–83, 286, 289
Simmel, Georg, 363n68
Simon de Montfort, miracles of, 133 sincerity, 42, 46–47, 52, 69–71, 74, 76, 93, 124, 321, 352
Skillington (Lincolnshire), 118, 167–76, 177, 179–80, 183, 199, 210
Snitterfield (Warwickshire), 149–52 social capital. See trust: and social capital; trustworthy men: social capital of social church (historiographical turn), 4, 7, 350 social stratification, 132, 211, 219, 228. See also intersectionality; trustworthiness: and inequality
Somerset, 149–52, 183, 188, 207–9, 215, 226, 272, 282, 343
Southwick (Hampshire), 144–48, 196–98, 204, 210
Speculum vitae, 24
Spofford, Thomas (bishop of Hereford), 22, 270
Stafford, John (bishop of Bath and Wells), 207
Staffordshire, 210, 236, 262, 292
Stavensby, Alexander (bishop of Coventry and Lichfield), 210
St David's, diocese of, 218
Stevyns, Katherine, 81–83
Stonor, Elizabeth, 70–1
Stour Provost (Dorset), 153–55
strangers, 54, 80–81, 84, 122, 391n19
Stratford, John (archbishop of Canterbury), 216
Stratford (Warwickshire), 216
Strubby (Lincolnshire), 140, 167–76, 178, 181 subjectivity, 4, 16, 46, 221, 245, 307, 310, 317, 321, 327, 347, 350
Suffolk, 235, 329
suicide, 323
summoners, 165, 186, 223, 257, 337
Surrey, 59, 77, 109
Sussex, 103, 256
Sutton, Oliver (bishop of Lincoln), 188
Sutton Waldron (Dorset), 153–55
Sweteman, Milo (archbishop of Armagh), 218
Swinfield, Richard (bishop of Hereford), 283 symbolic role. See trustworthiness synodal constitutions, 341–42

- tallies, 37
- Tancred (canonist), 108, 254
- taxation. See clerical subsidies; lay subsidies; poll taxes; trustworthy men: as tax assessors; trustworthy men: tax paid by
- testimony, 100, 106, 117, 125, 233, 243–44, 247, 250–3, 255, 260–1, 265, 277, 295, 314, 319–20, 325, 332–33, 339, 350. See also knowledge: local; trust: epistemology of
- Teutonicus, Johannes, 108–9
- theft, 38, 47, 78, 82, 115, 121, 186, 196–98, 210, 272, 319
- Theodoret of Cyrus, 105
- Thomas of Kempis (Imitatio Christi), 73
- Thoresby, John (archbishop of York), 124, 311
- Tilly, Charles, 13, 163, 188, 198, 224
- tithes, 39, 57, 194, 205, 245, 268–69, 294–99, 300–1
- tithings, 209
- Tönnies, Ferdinand, 11
- tools (agricultural and industrial), 37, 228
- transaction costs, 49, 244, 336
- transhumance, 210
- The Treatise of Hope*, 76
- Trillek, John (bishop of Hereford), 334
- troth, 35, 37, 45, 47, 66, 76, 102, 238, 335
- trust: and authority, 17, 26, 205, 238 (see also faith: in the church); and calculation, 13, 35, 54, 64, 84–85, 244; conditional, 84; and death, 84–85; and discrimination, 5, 14, 40, 88, 91, 93, 134, 155, 223, 342, 351–52; and economic exchange, 34, 36, 46–49, 52, 60, 152, 155, 236, 363n68, 380n92; and emotion, 52, 63–64, 67–68, 72, 87 (see also faith: and emotion); epistemology of, 14, 16, 42, 63, 78, 251, 345 (see also faith: epistemology of); and equality, 48, 50, 57, 162, 373n143; and ethnicity, 79–80; and fragmentation, 305–6; and the future, 85, 267; and gender, 69, 78–79, 232; generalized, 199, 356n3, 381n1; group, 55–56; historical studies of, 14; and independence, 55; and inequality, 40, 57–58, 93, 162, 351–52; and institutions, 35, 53, 88, 91–92; interpersonal, 27, 30, 33, 46, 49, 88, 222; and law, 35–62; loss of, 83–88, 294, 345; and materiality, 27–28; and mental states, 321–22; and modernity, 11–14, 26, 35, 48, 91–92, 167; and sanctions, 13, 35–36, 46, 50, 54, 56–58, 270 (see also sanctioning community); and social capital, 55, 58, 88, 161–62 (see also trustworthy men: social capital of); and solidarity, 35, 58, 167, 335–36; and stereotyping, 49, 93; and uncertainty, 71; and unconscious signalling, 41; unexamined, 86–87; and women, 78–79, 224, 228–29; and writing, 35, 259. See also contracts; faith; promises; trustworthiness
- trustworthiness: and family, 133, 137–38, 155; as a hollow rhetoric, 123–27; and inequality, 131–32, 141–57, 161, 163, 176–85, 202–9, 212–17, 220, 226, 229–38, 347, 351–52; and masculinity, 88, 117, 155, 198–200, 229–38; and materiality, 224, 226–29; and names, 137; and the nobility, 125; and occupation, 138, 154; as personal quality, 78, 81, 238; and settlement patterns, 147–48, 153, 176–83, 204, 209–10, 234; and space, 224–26; as a symbolic role, 92–93, 100, 103, 116–17, 119–23, 132, 161–62, 193, 202, 204–5, 220, 241, 247, 250, 265, 286, 308, 336, 347, 350; and voice, 116–17; and women, 115, 127, 133–34, 155, 161, 199–200, 229–32. See also trustworthy men
- trustworthy men: age of, 109, 132, 134–35, 155, 223, 301–2; availability of, 204–6, 211, 220; behaviour of, 185–99; as compurgators, 318; definition of, 2, 95, 105, 113–14, 224; and documentary culture, 227–28; outside England, 217, 386–87n53; episcopal expectations of, 114–19, 313; gentry as, 207–8; legal status of, 114–15, 135–36, 141, 228, 301; as manorial officers, 130–31, 138–40, 152, 154–56, 189, 192, 205; Middle English translation of, 116 (see also faith: translation of); number of, 119; origins of concept, 104–10, 222; rent paid by, 131, 144–48, 156, 196; selection of, 186–87, 189,

- 224, 249; social capital of, 119, 141, 162, 164, 190, 199–203, 209, 224, 226, 235, 238, 249, 318, 347; as tax assessors, 140, 167, 216; tax paid by, 148–56; in towns, 153–54, 181–82, 213–17; wealth of, 139, 141–56, 187–88, 190, 198, 204, 215, 224. See also boni homines; fideles; legali homines; probi homines; prudeshommes
- truth, 35, 43, 47, 49, 66, 74, 105, 117, 125, 223, 229, 244, 248, 250–2, 257, 259–62, 264–65, 280, 332, 334. See also troth
- Twyford (Hampshire), 141
- uncertainty. See trust: and uncertainty
- universities, 217
- unfaithfulness, 22. See also untrustworthiness
- untrustworthiness, 80, 82–83, 110, 230; and dirt, 110, 228, 233; and poverty, 81–82, 116, 142. See also distrust; unfaithfulness
- usury, 274
- verdicts, 264
- vicars. See parish clergy
- violence, 47, 53, 316. See also domestic violence; murder
- visitation, 36, 59, 109, 114, 117, 119–22, 131–32, 143, 164–65, 167, 176, 192, 194–95, 198, 218, 225, 236–37, 243, 249, 251, 254, 256–58, 262–63, 276, 279, 283, 285, 289, 292, 308–9, 311–13, 316–17, 326–28, 333, 337, 342–43, 408n105; articles of, 118, 311
- Vodola, Elisabeth, 29
- Wales, 110, 210, 217–19, 270
- Walter (bishop of Glasgow), 218
- Waltham, John (bishop of Salisbury), 121, 139, 144, 189, 198
- Warwickshire, 149–52, 298–99, 335
- Watson, Sethina, 355n8
- Weber, Max, 11, 337
- wed and borrow, 27, 51, 131. See also pledging
- weights and measures, 79, 140, 192
- Wellingore (Lincolnshire), 87, 149–52, 156, 167–76, 177, 179, 199
- Weltecke, Dorothea, 25, 64
- Westminster, Council of, 341
- Westmorland, 212
- Whitford, Richard (Werke for Household-ers), 87
- Wickwane, William (archbishop of York), 344
- Wilfrid, Saint, 30, 338
- William of Auvergne, 20, 361n27
- William of Moerbeke, 116
- William of Pagula. See Paull, William
- William de Vere (bishop of Hereford), 364n90
- Williams, Bernard, 13
- wills and testaments, 34, 39, 55, 194, 215, 218, 235–36, 257, 259, 268, 273–75, 322–23. See also executors
- Wiltshire, 121–22, 231, 248, 283, 310, 432n74
- Wimbledon, Thomas, 222
- Wimborne (Dorset), 137, 190–3
- Winchelsey, Robert of (archbishop of Canterbury), 326
- Winchester, diocese of, 59, 78, 103, 109, 136, 165, 196–98, 204, 236, 327, 343. See also Asserio; Gervais; Pontoise; Sandale; Woodlock; Wykeham
- Wingham (Kent), 139, 142–43, 195, 312
- Wisbech (Cambridgeshire), 57, 61, 165, 319
- Witheridge (Devon), 301–3
- witnesses, 35–36, 41, 43, 45, 51–52, 81, 100, 102, 104, 108, 114–17, 186, 221, 223, 262, 264, 325; female, 115–16, 133, 229, 231–32
- women and the law, 115, 117, 162, 229, 231–32, 368n31. See also misogyny; trust: and women; trustworthiness: and women; witnesses: female
- Woodlock, Henry (bishop of Winchester), 136
- Wolf, Greg, 346
- Worcester, diocese of, 54, 118, 124, 248, 272, 299. See also Bransford, Wolstan de; Cantilupe, Walter de; Cobham, Thomas; Montacute, Simon; Orleton, Adam; Reynolds, Walter
- Worcestershire, 39, 133, 165–66, 183–85, 250, 272
- Writhel, Hugh, 188–89

- Wyatt, Thomas, 84–85
Wyclif, John, 30, 80, 258, 328
Wycliffites, 123, 258, 327–28, 344
Wycliffite Bible, 23, 71
Wykeham, William (bishop of Winchester), 197
- York, 84, 119–20, 166, 271, 324; cathedral, 278; diocese of, 116, 126, 129, 134, 182, 186, 207, 212, 229, 248, 322, 333–34, 338, 343. See also Bowet, Henry; Corbridge, Thomas; Giffard, Walter; Gray, Walter; Greenfield, William; Kempe, John; Melton, William; Romeyn, John; Scrope, Richard; Thoresby, John; Wickwane, William; Zouche, William
- Yorkshire, 38, 40, 44, 52, 125, 129–31, 133, 211, 213, 223, 227, 231, 248–49, 263, 273, 280, 282, 292, 298, 303, 314, 318, 324, 327, 343–45
- Zouche, William (archbishop of York), 303