

CONTENTS

*Preface to the Anglo-American Edition:
When Fears Become Reality* ix

Introduction: History Provides No Vaccines	1
1 Slavery and Racism	16
2 Bossism	30
3 Patrimonialism	52
4 Corruption	75
5 Social Inequality	111
6 Violence	135
7 Race and Gender	156
8 Intolerance	186
When the End Is Also a Beginning: The Ghosts of Our Present	199
Methodological Afterword: An Anthropology of History and of the Present	213
Appendix: Glossary of Brazilian Political Parties	241

© Copyright, Princeton University Press. No part of this book may be distributed, posted, or reproduced in any form by digital or mechanical means without prior written permission of the publisher.

viii CONTENTS

Acknowledgments 245

Notes 247

Bibliography 257

Index 271

Introduction

HISTORY PROVIDES NO VACCINES

BRAZIL HAS A MOST PARTICULAR HISTORY, at least when compared to its Latin American neighbors. Nearly half of all enslaved Africans violently forced from their lands ended up in Brazil; and after gaining independence, Brazil, though surrounded by republics, formed a monarchy that enjoyed wide support for more than sixty years, thanks to which the country—the enormous size of which more closely approximates that of a continent—kept its borders intact. On top of this, because Brazil was a Portuguese colony, its inhabitants speak a different language from their neighbors.

Brazilian Authoritarianism dialogues, in part, with data and conclusions that appear in Brasil: Uma Biografia (2015; published in English as Brazil: A Biography, 2018), which I wrote with Heloisa Starling. I also make selective use of columns I have published since 2014 in the newspaper Nexo. As my aim is to give a general, not an exhaustive, view on a series of subjects that explain authoritarian practices characteristic of the country, some of which are not strictly part of my professional and academic specializations, I was only able to write this book thanks to the excellent books, reports, and articles written by academics, activists, and journalists on the subjects contained herein. As the circumstances of publication of the original (Portuguese) edition of this book did not allow for systematic use of footnotes or endnotes, a bibliography has been included at the end, in which I list details of works cited in the main text. (Bibliographical endnotes are instead provided, however, for the preface and afterword added for this English-language edition.)

Brazil is also a very young and original country when it comes to a regular institutional life. A good number of its national establishments were created when the Portuguese royal family arrived in 1808, at which time the first schools of surgery and anatomy were founded in the cities of Salvador and Rio de Janeiro. In Spanish colonies, by contrast, the university system dates back much further, to the sixteenth, seventeenth, and eighteenth centuries: the universities of Santo Domingo (1538), Lima (1551), Mexico City (1551), Bogotá (1580), Quito (1586), Santiago (1621), Guatemala (1676), Havana (1721), Caracas (1721), and Asunción (1733).

It was only with the arrival of the Portuguese court,<sup>1</sup> and the doubling of the population in some Brazilian cities, that the country would no longer rely exclusively on graduates of the University of Coimbra (in Portugal). The first Brazilian higher schools were the Royal Military Academy (founded in 1810), the Agriculture Course (1814), and the Royal Academy of Painting and Sculpture (1820), offering courses that earned one a professional diploma: one's ticket to privileged government posts and a highly restricted job market with its attendant social prestige. At the same time, the Royal Botanic Garden, the Royal School of the Sciences, Arts, and Crafts, the Royal Museum, the Royal Library, the Royal Press, and the Banco do Brasil were also founded—this last, according to witnesses, having been “bankrupt from the outset.”

The Portuguese Crown also sought to transplant from Lisbon its enormous bureaucracy, a hierarchical structure that had previously been located at the Paço in the Portuguese capital, and which included the Government-General of Brazil, the captaincies, and the municipal assemblies. The judiciary had already established a presence in Brazil with the Tribunal da Relação (an appeals court), tied to the Casa da Suplicação—a royal higher court of appeals in the Portuguese capital; but this higher court also came in the prince regent's “baggage,” along with other older Portuguese tribunals: the Desembargo do Paço, the highest court in this structure, and the Mesa da Consciência e Ordens (Board of the King's Conscience and of the Military Orders), linked to the archbishop of Brazil.

Political independence in 1822 brought few changes in institutional terms, but it established a clear objective: to build and provide the justification for a new nation that would also, as we have seen, be unique in the American context—a monarchy surrounded by republics on all sides.

It was no small task. There was the need to draft a new constitution, see to the health of the sick population, which had grown considerably, train engineers to secure the borders and plan new cities, bring proceedings that had previous been decided according to custom and regional power balances under the auspices of the judiciary, and, not least, invent a new history for Brazil, since until then the country's history was still largely that of Portugal. It is no wonder, then, that among the first institutions founded upon independence was the Brazilian Historical and Geographical Institute (IHGB), in 1838. Located in Rio de Janeiro, this center's purpose was clear: to create a history that could glorify the past and to promote patriotism through its various activities and productions. To identify the philosophy that led to the creation of the IHGB, one need only pay attention to the first civil service exam to be held there. In 1844, the doors were opened to candidates who were willing to hold forth on a thorny question: "How should the history of Brazil be written?" The prompt was clear; it left no room for doubt. It was a matter of inventing a new history of and for Brazil.

This was the first fundamental step taken toward establishment of the discipline that would come to be called, years later and without much thought, "History of Brazil," as though the narratives it contained had come ready-made or been the exclusive result of will or so-called destiny. We know, however, that in the vast majority of cases the opposite happens: founding moments seek to privilege a certain historical narrative to the detriment of others, and initiate a true rhetorical battle—inventing rituals of memory and classifying their own models as authentic (and any others as false); privileging certain events and obliterating others; endorsing certain interpretations and discrediting others. Such episodes are, therefore, useful for shedding light on the political artifice involved and its motivations. In other words, they help us to understand how, when, and why, at certain moments, history becomes an object of political dispute.

In the case just cited, the intention of the exam was to create a single history that was (of course) European in its argument, imperial in its justification, and centered around events that took place in Rio de Janeiro. Unseating Salvador, Rio de Janeiro had become the capital of Brazil in 1763—it would remain so until 1960—and needed, accordingly, to assert its political and historical centrality. Further, “the establishment” needed to reinforce the notion of its august origins, and to defend the composition of its membership, which consisted basically of local agrarian elites.

In this sense, nothing could have been more appropriate than the invention of an official history that could buttress what, at that time, appeared artificial and, furthermore, inchoate: an independent state in the Americas, but one whose conservative bent led to the formation of an empire (under a Portuguese monarch, Dom Pedro I) and not a republic. Further, there was a need to extol an emancipation process that had generated considerable distrust and to confer legitimacy upon it. After all, in contrast to its Latin American neighbors, the head of the Brazilian State was a monarch, the direct descendant of three of the longest established royal families in Europe: the Braganzas, the Bourbons, and the Hapsburgs.

The unusual nature of the IHGB competition was also reflected in its result and the announcement of the winner. First place in this historic dispute went to a foreigner—the well-known Bavarian naturalist Karl von Martius (1794–1868), a scientist of unquestioned importance who, nonetheless, was a novice when it came to history in general and that of Brazil in particular—who offered the theory that the country was defined by its unrivaled mixture of peoples and races. He wrote, “The focal point for the historian ought to be to show how, in the development of Brazil, established conditions are to be found for the perfecting of the three human races, placed here side by side in a manner hitherto unknown.” Drawing upon the metaphor of the country’s Portuguese heritage as a powerful river which would “cleanse” and “absorb the streams of the races India and Ethiopica,” von Martius represented the country in terms of the singularity and scale of the mixture between people living there.

At that point, however, and after so many centuries of a violent slaveholding system—which took for granted the ownership of one person by another and created a rigid hierarchy between Whites who held power and Blacks who ought to submit, but not infrequently rebelled—it was, to say the least, complicated to flatly extol harmony. Further, Indigenous peoples were still being decimated along the coastline and deep in the heart of the country, their lands invaded and their cultures defiled. But this did not stop the Empire from seizing the opportunity to select a proposal that reconciled Brazil’s past with its present and that, instead of introducing historical facts and thus demonstrating the prevailing cruelty in the country, presented a nation whose “happiness” was measured by its capacity to bring various nations and cultures together as one: a text, that, at its core, invoked an Edenic and tropical Brazilian “nature,” exempt from all suspicion or denial.

Von Martius, who in 1832 had published an essay entitled “The Rule of Law among the Aborigines in Brazil,” condemning Indigenous peoples to extinction, now opted to define the country according to a redemptive fluvial metaphor. Three long rivers would define a nation: one broad and roaring, made up of White populations; another, smaller, representing the Indigenous; and yet another, smaller still, pertaining to Black Brazilians. In the rush to write his work, the naturalist appears not to have had the time (or interest), however, to inform himself in equal measure of the history of the three peoples who were at the origins of the young autonomous nation. The section concerning the “White river” was the most complete, reassuring, and extensive. The remaining two sections were virtually figurative, demonstrating a clear lack of knowledge, though this shortcoming applied to what was anyway in truth “expendable,” as the text had already accounted for everything that was really of interest: to tell a national history—the European—and show how it had “naturally” and without bloodshed imposed itself upon the rest.

And so we had the three peoples who together had formed Brazil—three peoples who were one but (also) distinct and separate. Commixture was not (and never had been) synonymous with equality. In fact, it was in this commixture that a “self-evident” hierarchy took root, propped up—as exemplified in von Martius’s article—by appeal to an immortal past lost to time. This narrative provided an ideal vehicle for inventing a history that was as peculiar (a tropical monarchy defined by commixture) as it was optimistic: the flowing waters represented the future of a country being molded by a great roaring river into which all small tributaries emptied.

It was at this time that the common refrain regarding Brazil’s three foundational races, a concept that would continue to resonate as time wore on, gained traction. Several authors repeated, with minor variations, the same argument: Sílvio Romero in Introdução à história da literatura brasileira (Introduction to Brazilian literary history) (1882), Oliveira Viana in Raça e assimilação (Race and assimilation) (1932), and Artur Ramos in Os horizontes místicos do negro da Bahia (The mystical horizons of the Black man in Bahia) (1932). Later, in an ironic and critical idiom that nonetheless demonstrates the narrative’s staying power, the modernist Mário de Andrade, in his 1928 work Macunaíma, would recite the formula in a well-known allegorical passage in which the hero Macunaíma and his two brothers decide to bathe in magical waters that had settled in the footprint of the Indigenous spirit Sumé, after which each emerges a different color: one white, one black, and the other “the new bronze.”

It was Gilberto Freyre more than anyone who ensured this interpretation took hold, not only in his classic Casa-grande &

senzala (The Masters and the Slaves) (1933) but, years later, in books on Lusotropicalism such as O mundo que o português criou (The world forged by the Portuguese) (1940). While anthropologist Artur Ramos (1903–49) might have been the one to coin the term “racial democracy” and apply it to Brazil, it was Freyre’s role to be the great promoter of this expression, even beyond the country’s borders.

The international resonance of Freyre’s theory was such that it was not long before UNESCO came knocking. At the end of the 1940s, the institution was still reeling from the opening of Nazi concentration camps, which revealed the methods of state-sponsored violence and genocide and imparted a warning about the consequences of racism as practiced during the Second World War. It was also very much aware of apartheid in South Africa and the politics of hate that took root during Second World War and the Cold War. Buoyed, then, by the theories of the anthropologist from Recife, and certain that Brazil was an example of racial harmony for the world, the organization financed, in the 1950s, a broad survey with the intent to prove the absence of racial and ethnic discrimination in the country. However, the result was at the very least paradoxical. While the research in the Brazilian Northeast led by Americans Donald Pierson (1900–1995) and Charles Wagley (1913–91) sought to corroborate Freyre’s theories, the São Paulo group, led by Florestan Fernandes (1920–95) came to exactly the opposite conclusion. For the sociologist from São Paulo, the greatest legacy of slavery—practiced in Brazil for more than three centuries—was not a unifying commixture but the reinforcement of a deeply embedded social inequality.

In the words of Fernandes, Brazilians have “a sort of reactive prejudice: prejudice against prejudice,” since they prefer denial to recognizing and remedying the situation. It was also Fernandes who called the already traditional story of the three races the “myth of racial democracy,” nonetheless giving renewed life to the narrative and the fallacies that led to it. It took Black activists to finally administer the coup de grâce when, starting at the end of the 1970s, they began to show the perversion behind this type of official discourse, which threatened to outlast social movements struggling for true equality and inclusion. Despite their efforts, the image of the confluence of three rivers retained its impact across Brazil and maintained the ring of truth more than a century after its creation.

As we have seen, the history that Karl von Martius told in the early years of the nineteenth century had the features and form of myth: a national myth. It took the country's fundamental problems, such as an all-pervasive system of slavery, and recast them as harmonizing and positive attributes. For this very reason, the Martius text did not make reference to dates, specific locations, or well-known events; since it was crucial that the text make sense well beyond the time it was written, the absence of geographical and, above all, temporal specifics would confer immortality upon it and instill confidence in a grandiose version of the country's past and a still more promising future. It was the myth of "the golden age," which served to sustain certainty about the present and guarantee the continuation of the same order and hierarchy—as though these were eternal, because preordained.

Further, there was a certain rhetorical indeterminacy to the text that ensured it a prolonged reception: history becoming myth, and vice versa—the social myth transformed into history. An important detail is that myths do not necessarily work as "lies." As the ethnologist Claude Lévi-Strauss showed, because myths are concerned with deep contradictions within a society, they retain their power insofar as they operate beyond rational arguments or data and documents that seek to deny their veracity. After all, it often is easier to live with a false truth than to face reality.

During the nineteenth century, the IHGB would fulfill its mission, advancing the project that von Martius had begun. Well financed by the Empire, the center sought to popularize a grandiloquent and patriotic history, even if, at times, it had to sacrifice more impartial research in favor of texts that served as State propaganda. The metaphor of the three races would define, for a long time, the essence and the foundation of what it meant to write a history of and about Brazil; or, more precisely, of a given Brazil, a particular utopia, which remains with us to the present day, as though it were reality.

To grow accustomed to inequality, to run from the past, is characteristic of authoritarian governments, which not infrequently resort to “whitewashed” narratives as a way of promoting the State’s power and their own. It is also a formula applied with relative success among ordinary Brazilians, however. Besides acquiescing in the fallacy of the three races, Brazilians are accustomed to shaking off the immense inequality in their country, and without much difficulty transforming a reality defined by the intense concentration of power in the hands of landowners into the ultimate proof of an aristocratic past.

As forms of understanding of the past, history and memory are not always aligned, or even complementary. History not only bears within it certain lacunae and misunderstandings vis-à-vis the past, but also frequently manifests as an arena for disagreement, debate, and dispute. For this reason, it is inconclusive. Memory, meanwhile, invariably brings a subjective dimension to its analysis as it translates the past into the first person and is devoted to the very act of remembrance that produces it. In so doing, memory recovers “the present from the past” and so ensures that the past, too, becomes present.

We will see that there is no way entirely to overcome the past, but the intention of this book is to “remember.” Such is the best way to rethink the present while not forgetting to imagine the future.

Every nation constructs for itself certain basic myths, which together have the ability to evoke in its citizens a sense of belonging to a single community that will remain unchanged—“forever lying in splendid cradle,” as Brazil’s national anthem proclaims. Stories with a clear impact and importance within context take on a whole new meaning when they break free from the moment at which they were born and are filtered through the logic of common sense or transformed into national rhetoric.

By becoming myth, these discourses are stripped of their critical potential, to instead be subjected to a single reading or interpretation—that which exalts a glorious past and a single ennobling history. Such a form of State utopia tends to envisage, besides the misleading representation of Brazilian racial commixture that we have explored up to this point, an idyllic patriarchal society, with a hierarchy as deeply rooted as it is virtuous. This is a form of narrative that fails strictly to adhere to the facts, since it begins by choosing its overriding message, and only then conceives of a good argument to justify it.

Nor was von Martius alone in producing this type of narrative. It was a sanctified model of historical practice around the beginning of the nineteenth century, when a primary preoccupation of those in power was the aggrandizement of the past, and not so much the authentication of documents and the story that these had to tell. The historian's job, in fact, was to stitch together edifying examples from the past and thus confer dignity upon the present. This is also the concept of "true romance," as proposed by Paul Veyne to explain the role of the historian as a sort of orchestrator of events, in the sense that it is the historian who organizes them, chooses them, and endows them with meaning.

In one form or another, historical narrative always leads to battles over the monopoly on truth. However, history becomes particularly fertile not only during changes of government or regime, as in the case of the work of our German naturalist, but also at moments of economic crisis. In such cases, when a significant portion of the national population falls into poverty, inequality grows, and political polarization divides the public—encouraged by feelings of fear, insecurity, and resentment—it is not uncommon to go in search of faraway explanations for problems that impact us closely. Further, it is in such periods that the people become more vulnerable and predisposed to believe that their rights have been infringed, their jobs stolen, and finally, that their own history has been taken from them.

Such moments tend to dissolve into disputes over the best version of the past, which becomes something of a rigged competition whose outcome is determined by the present and its pressing questions. At this point, history is transformed into something of an exercise in justification—not unlike a chant sung by a sports team’s most dedicated fans.

The construction of an official history is not, therefore, an innocuous or unimportant undertaking: it has a strategic role in State policy, exalting certain events and minimizing problems that the nation experienced in the past but prefers to forget, yet whose roots extend into the present. By the same token, the process permits only a single interpretation, focusing on certain specific actions and forms of socialization while obliterating others. The goal is, as the von Martius example demonstrated, to make peace with the past: to create a mythical past, lost to time, replete with harmony, and founded on the naturalization of frameworks of authority and obedience.

This kind of paradigm, which includes much imagination and projection, frequently functions as a sort of mortar for various “common sense” theories. In Brazil, everyday history tends to derive support from four assumptions, as pivotal as they are erroneous. The first is that Brazil is a uniquely harmonious country, free of conflict. The second, that Brazilians are impervious to any form of hierarchy, resolving conflicts, as a rule, with considerable ease and fairness. The third is that the country is a full democracy, free from racial, religious, or gender prejudices. The fourth, that the country’s natural beauty is such that it guarantees Brazil’s status as a paradise. After all, until proven otherwise, God (too) is Brazilian.

Far from being unimpeachable narratives, these are models resulting from agendas that are both deep-seated and deeply equivocal, and which, for this very reason, summon their strength from the absence of rebuttal and continued silence. When silence persists, it is undoubtedly because elsewhere there is too much noise. Noise, and social unease.

The problem is that this practice of history, reliant as it is on national myths, is so deeply ingrained that it tends to survive the most stubborn reality. How could one ever possibly assert that Brazil is a peaceful country, if for centuries enslaved men and women filled the land, and the country tolerated for more than three hundred years a system that presupposes the ownership of one person by another? Let us not forget that Brazil was the last country in the Americas to abolish such forms of forced labor—after the United States, Puerto Rico, and Cuba—having received 5.85 million Africans out of a total of 12.52 million who were forcibly removed from their own continent in this immense Atlantic diaspora, the largest in modern times. If we take into account only those who survived the journey, the total, according to the website Slave Voyages (<https://www.slavevoyages.org>), was still 10.7 million, of whom 4.8 million made it to Brazil. In place of an idyll, the enslaved experienced violence in its many forms and in a variety of contexts: while masters imposed control by force and cruelty, enslaved men and women themselves responded to this violence with all manner of rebellion.

Another question: How is it possible to describe a country in terms of an idea of purported amity, shared among its citizens, when it is still a world leader in social, racial, and gender inequality—a fact supported by research that demonstrates the routine practice of discrimination against women, Indigenous groups, and Black people, as well as lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, cross-dressing, and other queer individuals?

It is also worth asking why, at intervals, and especially at moments of political crisis, Brazilians fall prey to the delusion of the “serenity” of the military dictatorship, as though it had been a charmed period that brought with it the magical solution to our most fundamental problems. Why is it, moreover, that they refer continually to the lack of hierarchy in their social relationships when their past and present give the lie to this idea? It is not possible to gloss innocently over the fact that Brazil was an exploitation colony, or that its territory was almost entirely divided into vast single-crop estates where wealthy landowners deployed immense authority and violence while maintaining economic and political monopolies. Indeed, though Brazil is an increasingly urban country, a certain mindset stubbornly persists, one forged on the large estates, whose owners became the kingpins of the First Republic (1889–1930), and some of whom still hide behind their castle walls in their respective states, acting as political and electoral rainmakers. In the context of such regional and personalist forms of immense power, the country developed patrimonialist practices that imply the use of the State to personal ends. Granted, during the last thirty years Brazil has forged more robust institutions, but today these nevertheless show signs of weakness as they waver in the path of certain political winds. And this is not to mention the practice of corruption, which, as we shall see, whatever the various forms it has taken and the names used to designate it over time, was already common in the colonial and imperial eras and grew like a weed after the country adopted a republican form of government, devouring Brazilians' rights and privileges.

It is said that to question is a form of resistance. I am of the mind that a critical historical practice is one that knows how to “de-normalize” that which seems ordained by biology and is consequently presented as immutable. There is nothing in Brazilian blood or DNA to indicate that the problems outlined above are immune to humane and civic-minded action. Nor is it beneficial to adopt the alternative approach of relegating to the past and to “others” who came before them responsibility for everything that bothers Brazilians about their country today: “somebody else” is racist (not me); patrimonialism is a legacy of the country's prior history; inequality is a result of slavery—period. The blame for all of the country's current ills cannot be laid on a distant and inaccessible past. Ever since the colonial era, on through the Empire and later the republican era, Brazil has practiced an incomplete and failed form of citizenship, characterized by bossism, patrimonialism, diverse forms of racism, and sexism, discrimination, and violence. Though the country has experienced, since the ratification in 1988 of the People's Constitution, the most extensive period of rule of law and democracy since it became a republic in 1889, it has yet proved incapable of combating inequality or institutional racism against Black and Indigenous groups, or of eradicating gender violence. The present is full of a great deal of the past, and history is no consolation prize. It is crucial to face the present, not least because this is not the first time that Brazilians have returned to the past with questions forged in the present.

Therefore, for those who, to this day, cannot understand why we are living through such an intolerant and violent period; for those who express surprise at so many expressions of authoritarianism or the spread, unchecked, of discourses that openly undo a catalog of civil rights that until recently appeared guaranteed; for those who have watched from the stands the growth of a politics of hate that takes opponents and transforms them into enemies: I invite you all on a voyage through Brazil's history, past and present.

Currently, a conservative wave is sweeping through countries such as Hungary, Poland, the United States, Russia, Italy, and Israel, upending the international order and bringing with it new battles over the "true" story. There is nothing novel in this approach. In the former USSR, the Communist Party newspaper Pravda, whose name translates as "truth," was unequivocal: it defended authoritarianism as the only conceivable narrative. Even countries known for their liberal tradition tend to slide when they need to remember a past that they prefer to "forget." This was the case in France with regard to the Vichy regime (1940–44), during which local elites collaborated with Nazism, and currently is so in Spain, which has not managed to settle the score with the violent era of its Civil War (1936–39) that divided and still divides its population.

The elimination of "places of memory"—to use Pierre Nora's wonderful phrase—is, as a result, a widespread practice. However, this approach is still most common of all within societies where history plays a direct role in political struggle, becomes a form of nationalism, and soon glosses over or eliminates entirely the traumatic events of the past that it deems best forgotten. Brazil is “surfing” a conservative wave. Demonization of gender issues; attacks on minorities; a lack of trust in institutions and political parties; the adoption of dualities such as “us” (the righteous) versus “them” (the corrupt); campaigns against intellectuals and the press; the justification of order and violence, whatever the regime ultimately responsible for it; attacks against the constitution; and, finally, the insistence on a mythic past: these are all part of a longstanding narrative, but one that continues to exert an enormous impact on the country’s current situation.

The aim of this short book is to identify some of the roots of authoritarianism in Brazil, which flourishes in the present but is nonetheless intimately tied to the country’s five hundred years of history. The myths I have mentioned thus far amount to examples constituting a window that allows us to understand how authoritarian ideas and practices took hold there. Their examination also helps us to see how history and certain national myths are “weaponized”: in these cases, unfortunately, they are often transformed into mere propaganda, or a crutch to support easy answers.

The influential myth of racial democracy affords us an opportunity to understand the process behind the emergence of authoritarian practices and ideas common to Brazil. But there are other important windows onto this issue, too: patriarchy, bossism, violence, inequality, patrimonialism, and social intolerance are stubbornly present throughout the country’s history and continue to resonate in the present day. The purpose of this book is this: to build connections, often unexpressed, still less linear, between the past and the present.

History gives us no prescriptions for short- or long-term fixes. It can help us, however, to remove the veil of reverence and instigate a more critical discussion about Brazil’s past, its present, and Brazilians’ dreams for the future.

INDEX

Page numbers in italics refer to figures.

- 2015 Violence Map, 166
- A.B.C. (newspaper), 110
- abolition, 12, 18–19, 25, 28, 69, 118, 159, 248n2
- abortions, 18, 167
- Abreu, Irajá, 71–72
- Abreu, Kátia, 71
- activism, 1, 7, 24–25, 27, 29, 151, 163, 169
- Additional Act, 118–19, 250n1
- Adventures of Dr. Bogóloff, The* (Barreto), 109–10
- affirmative action, xiii, 25, 159
- Afghanistan, 22
- Afro-Brazilian culture, xii, 25–26, 157, 232
- age: children and, 37 (see also children); inequality and, 111, 116–19, 129–32, 157–61, 166–67, 171–72, 176, 185; life expectancy and, 17, 21–22, 96, 157–58; Maria da Penha Law and, 175–76; mortality rates and, 22, 28, 96, 114, 135, 152; slavery manuals and, 37; violence and, 136, 138, 140, 145, 152; voting, 69; youth and, 133 (see also youth)
- Age of Extremes, The* (Hobsbawn), 204–5
- Agostini, Ângelo, 88
- Agricultural Census, 43
- agriculture, 2, 122; bossism and, 31, 43, 45, 50; constitution and, 208; corruption and, 80–81, 90, 94; elitism and, 4; National Institute for Colonization and Agrarian Reform and, 154; National Institute for Land Settlement and Agrarian Reform (INCRA) and, 45, 134; patrimonialism and, 58, 62, 64, 68; plantations and, 16, 30–41, 57, 65, 81, 112, 161, 171, 249n3; slavery and, 25 (see also slavery); sugarcane, 31–33, 48, 57; violence and, 150–53
- Agriculture Course, 2
- AI 5 decree, xiv
- Alagoas, 46, 48–49, 136
- Albert, Bruce, 232, 255n70
- Alencar, José de, 146
- Alencastro, Luiz Felipe de, 62
- Algarves, 81
- Alencar, Otto, 71
- Almanak Laemmert*, 64
- Almeida, Manuel Antônio de, 55
- Álvares Cabral, Pedro, 168–69
- Alvin, Roberto, xi
- Amapá, 49
- Amaro Cavalcanti State School, 120
- Amazon, 51, 95–96, 149, 152, 213
- Amazonas, 144, 167
- Amazônia Celular, 100–101
- ambassadors, 84, 94–95
- Amnesty International, 22, 139
- Amoedo, Rodolfo, 147, 148
- Anchieta, José de, 147, 251n1

- Andersen, Hans Christian, 89
Andrade Gutierrez, 102
Angola, 62
Annual Report on Public Security in Brazil, 172 anthems, 9–10, 124, 126
anthropological view: anachronism and, 213–17, 221, 223, 233, 238; British functionalists and, 218, 220, 223; civilization and, 119, 145–50, 169, 201, 217–31; concealment of death and, xv–xix; of Evans-Pritchard, 217, 221–23; evolutionism and, 217–19, 223; of Geertz, 230–31; historical perspective and, 217–39; history as universal category, 216; of Latour, 233, 235; of Lévi-Strauss, 8, 219–29, 233, 254n48, 255n68; methodological issues and, 213–39; myth and, 233–39; presentism and, 214–15; of Sahlins, 217, 229–30; structuralism, 133, 221, 223, 225–30; Western model, 18–19, 81, 215, 218–19, 224, 227–39 “Anthropology and History” (Evans-Pritchard), 222 anti-Semitism, 192
Antonil, André João, 35 apartheid, 7, 28
Araguaia Guerrilla War, 97 archbishop, of Brazil, 3
Arendt, Hannah, 192
Ariès, Philippe, xv–xvii aristocracy: Blacks and, 32; bossism and, 31–35, 249n3; bureaucratic control by, 58; corruption and, 81–82, 87; invasion of, 61; invention of new, 31; landowners and, 9, 32–33, 35, 55, 249n3; meritocratic, 31, 63–64; patrimonialism and, 55–58, 61–65; pensions and, 57; physical labor and, 33; pretense to nobility and, 32; racism and, 32; rural, 55; titles and, 31, 34, 61–65, 81–82, 87
Arraes, Marília, 71 artisans, 16, 33
assassinations, 92, 97, 151, 161–64, 181
Atlas of Human Development in Brazil, 46
Atlas of Violence, 135–37, 166, 171 audits, 107–8 autonomy, 5, 56, 61, 69, 84, 133, 167, 175, 184, 250n1 Avante, 70, 241
aversion, 177, 194, 197, 203
Azevedo, Artur, 87
Azevedo, Fernando de, 122
Azevedo, Joaquim José de, 82
Azevedo, Militão Augusto de, 38, 39
Bacha, Edmar, 96
Bahia, 6, 31, 45–46, 49, 71, 98, 178, 196
Bakhtin, Mikhail, 215
Bali, 230–31
banana republics, 109
Banco do Brasil, xiii, 2, 92 bankruptcy, 2, 96, 98
Barbalho, Jader, 71
Barreto, Lima, 19–20, 109–10
Barreto family, 46
Barroso, Luís Roerto, 107
Batista, Joesley, 105
Belize, 135
Beloved (Morrison), 29
Bernardes, Artur, 91, 200
Bingos Scandal, 101 bionic governors, 97–98
bisexuality, 12, 178–84
Black Cultural Association, 24
Black Experimental Theater, 24
black market, 97
Black Rights Coalition, xxii
Blacks: and activism, xii, 7, 24–25, 27, 29; and affirmative action, xiii, 25, 159; African, 1, 12, 17, 23, 26, 62, 65, 78, 80, 118, 143–44, 170; Afro-Brazilian culture and, xii, 25–26, 157, 232; anthropological view and, 238–39; apartheid and, 7, 28; aristocracy and, 32; attempts to neutralize, xiv;

- Barreto and, 19–20; Bolsonaro and, 239; Brazilian Black Front and, 24; and censorship, xiii; and citizenship, 27; discrimination against, 12, 14, 20–29, 129, 161, 174; and education, xxi, 212; Freyre on, 6–7; imperialism and, 161; income gap and, xx, 113–14, 137; intellectual capacity of, 20; leadership and, 26; liberalism and, 19; life expectancy of, 158; and modernity, 238–39; mortality rates of, 23; and murder rates, xxi, 22; police and, 24, 101, 139, 160–62, 205; population data on, xx, 23, 205; and poverty, xx, 113, 115, 158, 205; and prison, 25, 28, 101, 205; and racism, 28 (see also racism); and segregation, 158; and slavery, 1, 12 (see also slavery); and social Darwinism, 19; and social inequality, 113–18, 121, 129, 131, 171, 174; and stereotypes, 164, 238; Unified Black Movement, 24–25; Union of Men of Color, 24; and violence, xii, xxi, 1, 139, 159–61, 164–68, 171, 176, 196–97, 204, 211; and women, 12, 25, 41, 113–15, 121, 129, 157–58, 161–68, 174, 176, 212
- Bloch, Marc, 226
- Bloodsucker Mafia Scandal, 73
- Boas, Franz, 218–19, 222, 253n17
- Bolsonaro, Eduardo, 71
- Bolsonaro, Flávio, 71
- Bolsonaro, Jair, ix–xiv, xvii, xxii, 103, 137–38, 213, 239, 243, 249n5
- Borges da Fonseca, Antônio, 83
- bossism: agriculture and, 31, 45; aristocracy and, 31–35, 249n3; clientelism and, x, 48; coffee and, 31, 35–39, 40, 65, 83–84, 120, 249n3; colonialism and, 31–32, 35–36, 38; conservatism and, 47, 49–50; corruption and, 48, 200, 235; credit and, 34, 36, 43, 45; crime and, 49, 73; democracy and, 43, 47, 49–50; dictatorship and, 46; education and, 49; elections and, 45–50; elitism and, 33, 35, 46, 49–51; Empire and, 35, 41–43; historical perspective on, 200; imperialism and, 36, 38, 248n2; landowners and, 31–36, 41–42, 50; legacy of, 13; masters and, 32–41; military and, 42, 47; municipal spread of, 51; National Guard and, 42, 66, 249n4; oligarchy and, 43, 46–50, 70, 90; patriarchal society and, 15, 32–33, 41, 45, 200; police and, 49; population of, 21; poverty and, 45–46; pretense to nobility and, 32; reform and, 50; republics and, 30, 41–43, 49; rights and, 37, 50–51; rural, 33–34, 41–46, 49–51; Salvador on, 30; slavery and, 31–43; social inequality and, 34, 43–45, 51; Vargas and, 46, 200; violence and, 49–50; voters and, 42–43; Whites and, 32, 41; women and, 32, 36–37, 41, 44
- Brasil Online, 71, 97
- Brasil Telecom, 100–101
- Brazil: Alagoas, 46, 48–49, 136; Amapá, 49; Amazonas, 144, 167; anthems and, 9–10, 124, 126; Bahia, 6, 31, 45–46, 49, 71, 98, 178, 196; Ceará, 46, 49, 71; colonialism and, 1 (see also colonialism); cost of capital of, 93, 127; Empire of, 4–5, 8 (see also Empire); exports and, 31, 57, 68, 80–81; First Republic of, 13, 20, 43, 68–69, 89–91, 110, 148; foundational races of, 6–7; Gini coefficients for, 44–45, 114; Goiás, 47–49, 93; independence of, 3–4, 6, 247n1, 248n2; land area of, 1, 44; Maranhão, 45–46, 70; Mato Grosso, 49, 151–52; Minas Gerais, 78–79, 93, 101, 104; New Republic of, 25, 42, 90; Pará, 46, 49, 71, 95; as paradise, 11, 110, 186, 201; Paraná, 48, 66, 98, 102–3; Pernambuco, 31, 49, 71; Political Constitution of the

- Brazil (continued)
Empire of Brazil and, 62; Rio do Janeiro, 2–4, 19 (see also Rio do Janeiro); Rio Grande do Norte, 47, 49, 71, 136, 167; rural areas of, 30, 33–34, 41–46, 49–51, 55, 62, 65, 90, 116, 130, 143, 151–52, 173–74, 186, 189–90; Salvador, 2, 4; Second Republic of, 24; Sergipe, 46, 49, 136; taxes and, 57, 59, 62, 78, 81–82, 100, 104, 115–16; Third Republic of, 98, 101, 151; as young country, 2
- Brazilian Black Front, 24
- Brazilian Central Railway, 91
- Brazilian Democratic Movement (MDB), 70–72, 103–4, 241–42
- Brazilian Geographical and Statistical Institute, 112–13
- Brazilian Historical and Geographical Institute (IGHB), 3–4, 8, 236
- Brazilian Institute for Democratic Action (IBAD), 94–95
- Brazilian Institute of Geography and Statistics (IBGE), xx–xxii, 115, 157
- Brazilian Internet Steering Committee, 197
- Brazilian Labor Party (PTB), 70, 100, 242
- Brazilian Movement for Democracy (PMDB), 47, 102, 104, 241
- Brazilian Public Safety Forum, 23, 135, 139–40, 197
- Brazilian Social Democracy Party (PSDB), 47–48, 70, 102, 104, 241–42
- Brazilian Socialist Party (PSB), 70, 242
- bribery, 76, 78–79, 83, 86, 91, 93, 102, 104–5
- British functionalists, 218, 220, 223
- Buarque de Holanda, Chico, xi, 139
- Buarque de Holanda, Sérgio, xix, 34, 54, 58, 189–90
- Budget Midgets Scandal, 73
- Bulhões, Leopoldo de, 48
- Bullet Caucas, 138
- bullying, 134, 195
- bureaucracy, 2, 49, 57–59, 62, 74, 83, 108, 134, 191
- Burkina Faso, 105
- Burton, Richard, 187
- Butler, Judith, 165
- Cabral de Mello, Evaldo, 32
- Caiado, Antônio José, 48
- Caiado, Ronaldo, 47–48
- Caiado, Totó, 48
- Caixa de Pecúlio dos Militares (Capemi), 95
- Calheiros, Renan, 48–49
- Calicut, 104
- Camargo, Sérgio Nascimento, xii
- Camargo Corrêa, 102
- Cameli, Gladson, 48
- Cameli, Orleir, 48
- Campos, Eduardo, 71
- Campos, João, 71
- Canada, 116
- candangos* (deplorable), 93
- Cândido, Antônio, 55
- Capanema Reform, 122
- Carnavais, malandros e heróis* (Carnivals, Rogues, and Heroes) (DaMatta), 55
- Carneiro da Cunha, Manuela, 144, 232
- Carneiro Leão, Honório Hermeto, 66
- Casa da Suplicação, 2, 60
- Casa-grande & senzala* (The Masters and the Slaves) (Freyre), 6–7
- castoff wheel, 17
- Castorp, Hans, 236–37
- Catholicism, 3, 32, 120; corruption and, 78; Indigenous peoples and, 147; intolerance and, 187–88; Jesuits, 35, 147, 187–88, 251n1; patrimonialism and, 67; slavery and, 16; violence and, 147, 251n1
- Ceará, 46, 49, 71
- ensorship, xiii, 95–96, 98, 134, 209
- census, 21, 43, 118, 152

- Chamber of Deputies, 66, 68–73, 84, 87, 94, 104
- Chater, Habib, 103
- chauvinism, 166, 179
- children: abandoned, 17, 29; abuse of, 142, 171; education and, 133, 206 (see also education); foundling wheel and, 17; gender roles and, 174; Home for Abandoned Children and, 120; illiteracy and, 118–34; Law of the Free Womb and, 18, 120; National Council on Rights of Children and Adolescents and, 184; slavery and, 17–18; social inequality and, 115, 119–20, 123, 126–27, 132–34; violence and, 138, 142, 145, 152, 171
- Chile, 44, 105, 127–28, 129
- China, 94
- Christian Labor Party (PTC), 70, 242
- Christians, xiii, 32, 70, 187, 191, 211, 239, 242, 248n1, 251n1
- CIA, 94–95
- Cicero, 233–34
- Cidadania, 46
- citizenship: democracy and, 209; education and, 27, 118, 121, 134, 176; failed form of, 13; full, 27, 154, 156; golden rule of, 198; patrimonialism and, 52, 69; social inequality and, 118, 121, 134
- civic pride, 124–27
- civilization, 119, 145–50, 169, 201, 217–31
- civil service exam, 3–4
- clientelism, x, 48, 52, 54, 69, 73
- climate change, xiii
- coffee, 31, 35–39, 40, 65, 83–84, 120, 249n3
- Cold War, 7
- Collins, David, 36
- Collor de Mello, Fernando, 98–99
- collusion, 54, 90, 103, 141
- Colombia, 44, 105, 127, 129, 135, 163
- colonialism, 1, 247n1; anthropological view of, 232; bossism and, 31–32, 35–36, 38; corruption and, 13, 77–82; crime and, 170, 177; delegated power and, 30; imperialism and, 13 (see also imperialism); Indigenous peoples and, 143–49, 170–71, 187, 232; intolerance and, 186–89; Lusitanian State and, 56–57, 60, 79, 82, 186–87; merit-aristocracy and, 31; patrimonialism and, 54–60, 74; Philippine Ordinations and, 60; plantations and, 16, 30–41, 57, 65, 81, 112, 161, 171, 249n3; racism and, 20, 27, 29; rape culture and, 168–73; slavery and, x, 20, 31, 35–36, 38, 55, 112, 170–71, 174, 200; social inequality and, 111–12, 118, 132; taxes and, 57, 59, 62, 78, 81–82, 100, 104, 115–16; Vaz de Camões on, 186–87; violence and, 143–46, 154, 168–74, 187, 251n1
- commixture, 6–7, 10, 23
- common good, 30, 52, 80, 198
- common sense theories, 10–11, 24, 160
- communism, 14, 70, 94–95, 242
- Communist Party of Brazil (PCdoB), 70, 242
- Company of Arms, 61
- Confederação dos Tamoios, A (The confederation of the Tamoios)* (Magalhães), 146–47
- Congressional Commission to Investigate Arms Traffic, 138
- conservatism: bossism and, 47, 49–50; consensus building and, 154; current wave of, 14–15, 200, 204; empire formation and, 4; intolerance and, 195; patrimonialism and, 66–67, 70; political parties and, 242; racism and, 25, 28; tradition and, 185, 202
- Consolidation of Labor Laws Decree (CLT), 123
- conspiracy, xiii–xiv, 95, 191
- Constitutional Convention of 1823, 83–84
- Constitutional Convention of 1946, 200

- constitutional issues: Articles, 19, 25, 62, 121, 152, 193, 209; attacks against, 15; Civil Constitution, 101; corruption, 77, 83–84, 90, 94, 101; democracy, 14, 193, 198, 203, 207–8, 210, 212; drafting a new constitution, 3, 121, 200; equality, 14, 26, 77, 118, 121, 180, 193, 209; gender, 179–80; intolerance, 193; New Republic and, 25; patrimonialism, 55, 62, 69; People's Constitution of 1988, 14, 25, 55, 69, 101, 118, 127, 151–52, 154, 193, 198, 208–9; Political Constitution of the Empire of Brazil and, 62; racism, 186; reform, 209; republics, 14, 25, 69, 84, 90, 101, 121, 150; rights, 25, 62, 69, 83–84, 90, 118, 143, 151–54, 193, 200, 207–10; slavery, 25, 118, 121, 200, 209; social inequality, 116, 118, 121, 127; Transitional Constitutions, 25; university admissions policy, 26; violence, 140, 143, 150–54
- Constitutional Transition Act, 154
- Constitution of 1824, 62, 118
- Constitution of 1934, 69
- cordiality, 54, 56, 189–90, 197
- Coronelismo, enxada e voto* (Coronelism, the plough, and the ballot box) (Nunes Leal), 68
- Correio da Manhã* (newspaper), 91
- corruption: acceptance of, 108; ambassadors and, 84, 94–95; aristocracy and, 81–82, 87; and assassinations, 92, 97, 151, 162–64, 181; audits and, 107–8; bionic governors and, 97–98; bossism and, 48, 200, 235; and bribery, 76, 78–79, 83, 86, 91, 93, 102, 104–5; building projects and, 93–96; bureaucratic, 74, 83, 108; Catholicism and, 78; and censorship, xiii, 95–96, 98, 134, 209; and collusion, 54, 90, 103, 141; colonialism and, 13, 77–82; conditions conducive to, 108–9; and conspiracy theories, xiii–xiv, 95, 191; constitutional issues and, 77, 83–84, 90, 94, 101; corporate, 100–104, 249n5; and cost of capital, 93, 127; Death Squadron and, 97; decapitation and, 68–69; democracy and, 102, 104, 109; dictatorship and, 92, 95–98; education and, 77, 104, 106; effects of, 75–77; elections and, 48, 67–69, 90–91, 99, 242; elitism and, 77, 80, 88, 91, 101, 106; Empire and, 81–85, 88–89; epithets for, 75–76; and fraud, 42, 67–68, 90–91, 100, 102, 107; gold and, 78–80; imperialism and, 13, 83–88; ingrained nature of, 205; intolerance and, 190–94; justice and, 83, 86–88, 101–2, 105–8, 249n5; landowners and, 78, 90; legal issues and, 76, 80–86, 94–110, 249n5; military and, 92–97, 161, 163; monarchy and, 79, 82–89; and money laundering, 100–106, 207, 249n5; moral issues and, 76, 80, 86, 96, 106, 108; Operation Calicut, 104; Operation Car Wash, 101–6, 207, 249n5; Operation Efficiency, 104; Operation Old Republic, 91; Operation Open Invoice, 104; Operation Street Peddler, 104; Operation Unfair Play, 104; patrimonialism and, 52–53, 73; police and, 86–88, 91, 96–97, 101–3; political parties and, 241–42; populism and, 204; Portuguese Crown and, 78–82, 85–86; poverty and, 96; prison and, 83, 97, 101, 103–6, 247n1; propina and, 75–76; protests against, 248n4; republics and, 75, 84, 89–92, 98, 101, 106, 109–10; repudiation of, 194; rights and, 75, 80, 83; Rio de Janeiro and, 78, 81, 89, 94–96, 103–4; rural areas and, 90; São Paulo and, 249n5; and scandal, 16, 73, 85–89, 92–101, 104, 107, 110, 172, 207, 249n5;

- self-enrichment and, 76–79, 103–4; slavery and, 78–81; social inequality and, 77, 112; taxes and, 78, 81–82, 100, 104; and theft, 77, 85–89, 140; titles and, 31, 34, 61–65, 81–82, 87; Tonelero
Street incident, 92; and torture,
96–97; use of term, 83; violence and,
142; voters and, 90, 94, 104; war on,
208, 211. See also reform
- Corruption Perceptions Index (TI study), 105
- Costa, Paulo Roberto da, 103
- Costa e Silva, Alberto da, 26
- Costa Rica, 172
- Council of State, 66
- coups, 92–95, 199–200
- courts: Casa de Suplicação, 2; corruption and, 81–86, 97, 100–108, 249n5; Desembargo do Paço, 2, 60; intolerance and, 189, 197; judiciary and,
2–3, 105, 208; juvenile offenders and,
23; legal issues and, 2, 26, 54, 57–69,
81–86, 97, 100–108, 119–20, 152, 189, 197, 249n5, 251n1; patrimonialism and, 54, 57–69; social inequality and, 119–20; Tribunal da Relação, 2; violence and, 152
- COVID-19 pandemic, xiv–xv, xvii, 118,
132, 213, 251n1
- credibility, 88, 195
- credit, 34, 36, 43, 45
- crime: bossism and, 49, 73; colonialism and, 170, 177; corruption and, 76, 86–87, 95, 102, 106–7; cross-country problem of, 172; dictatorship and,
194, 247n1; Disque 100 and, 182,
196; drugs and, 97, 137, 140–44, 158,
163, 205; intolerance and, 178–85, 194,
196; juvenile, 23; LGBTQ movement and, 178–85; military and, 162–63, 194, 207; murder, 22 (see also murder); police and, 202 (see also police); political parties and, 242; prejudice as, 179; prison and, 25, 163 (see also prison); public silence and, 185; racism and, 24–25, 194, 209; rape, 17, 29, 157, 168–73, 179, 182, 205, 247n1;
reporting of, 23, 140, 142, 157, 172, 176, 180–81, 197, 247n1; repudiation of, 194; robberies, 140–43; violence and, 138–43 (see also violence);
women and, 17, 29, 57, 157, 162–73,
176–82, 205, 209, 247n1
- cross-dressers, 12, 178, 180, 182, 203
- Crusades, 187
- Cuba, 2, 12
- Cunha, Carneiro da, 153
- Cunha, Eduardo, 103
- Curitiba, 102
- DaMatta, Robert, 55
- Dantas, Daniel, 100–101
- Darnton, Robert, 160
- death of death, xv–xix
- Death Squadron, 97
- debt, 45, 69, 96, 98, 195, 205
- DECAM-ECT, 99–100
- decapitation, 68–69
- deforestation, xiv
- degenerates, 19, 190, 203
- demagoguery, 139, 210
- democracy: bossism and, 43, 47, 49–50; citizenship and, 209; constitutional issues and, 14, 193, 198, 203,
207–8, 210, 212; corruption and, 102,
104, 109; dictatorship and, 24, 203,
208–11, 241; elections and, 47, 203–4,
210–11; enfranchised groups and,
203–4; full, 11; gender and, 185;
Greeks and, xix, 50, 194; intolerance and, 193–94, 198, 212; Linz on, 203–4; minorities and, 209; as a misunderstanding, xix; myth of racial, 7, 15, 29, 185, 211; participatory, 47; patrimonialism and, 70, 74; polarization and, 210; racial, 7, 15, 24, 27–29; reconstruction of, ix; redemocratization and, 55–56; rights and, 27, 50, 185,

- democracy (continued)
193–94, 205–6, 210; social inequality and, 133; social media and, 50–51; Tocqueville on, 206; Vieira on, 207; violence and, 155; as way of life, xix–xx
- Democracy in America* (Tocqueville), 206
- Democratic Labor Party (PDT), 70–71
- Democrats (DEM), 47, 70, 242
- Denmark, 23
- Desembargo do Paço, 2, 60
- “Dialética da malandragem” (Dialectic of malandroism) (Cândido), 55
- dictatorship: bossism and, 46; corruption and, 92, 95–98; crime and, 194, 247n1; democracy and, 24, 203, 208–11, 241; gender and, 178; intolerance and, 189, 194; military and, 12, 92, 95–97, 139, 189, 194, 200, 209, 241–42, 247; political parties and, 241–42; racism and, 24; social inequality and, 126; torture and, 247n1; violence and, 139
- Didi-Huberman, Georges, 214
- Dirceu, José, 100, 103
- disabilities, 184, 195, 210
- Disarmament Statute, 137–38
- discrimination: anthropological view and, 200; Article 5 and, 25; Brazilian Internet Steering Committee and, 197; education and, 129; gender and, 12; Indigenous peoples and, 12, 14, 183; intimidation and, 24; intolerance and, 186–98; LGBTQ movement and, 178–85; National Council to End Discrimination and, 183–84; perpetuation of, 20; police and, 159; Racial Equality Statute and, 26; racism and, 7 (see also racism); sexism and, 14, 173, 178–85, 192, 195, 206, 212, 235; social, 124, 156; stereotypes and, 32, 41, 162, 164, 169, 192, 238; systematic, 28; Universal Declaration of Human Rights and, 193; violence and, 14, 161; women and, 12
- Disque 100 (Dial 100), 182, 196
- diversity, xiii, 26–28, 51, 153, 179, 185, 198, 211, 228, 233
- DNA Propaganda, 100–101
- Dom Fernando de Portugal, 59
- Dominican Republic, 106
- Dom João I, 58, 61, 81–82
- Dom João II, 77
- Dom Lourenço de Almeida, 79
- Dom Manuel I, 77
- Dom Pedro I, 4, 62–63, 83–84, 87, 248n2, 249n1, 249n4, 250n1
- Dom Pedro II, 35, 62–66, 84, 88, 146–47, 149, 248n2, 249nn3 and 4
- Dom Rodrigo de Sousa Courtinho, 59
- drugs, 97, 137, 140–44, 158, 163, 205
- Drummond de Andrade, Carlos, 134, 199
- Dunker, Christian Ingo Lenz, 191–92
- Duterte, Rodrigo, 202
- “Economist and the King of Belíndia, The: A Fable for Technocrats” (Bacha), 96
- Ecuador, 95
- education: Additional Act and, 118–19; affirmative action and, xiii, 25, 159; Blacks and, xxi, 212; bossism and, 49; bullying in schools and, 134, 195; censuring and, xii; citizenship and, 27, 118, 121, 134, 176; civic pride and, 124–27; clear deficits in, 142; Consolidation of Labor Laws Decree (CLT) and, 123; corruption and, 77, 104, 106; discrimination and, 129; dropouts and, 132; elitism and, 162, 206; Federal Council on Education, 127; Fundamental Law of Education, 118–19; gender and, 119–21, 129, 162, 175, 177, 182; illiteracy and, 118–34; increased access to, 206, 210, 212, 248nn3 and 4; injustice in, 26;

- intolerance and, 188, 197–98; Law of the Free Womb, 18, 120; Maria da Penha Law, 175–76; National Educational Policy and Guidelines Statue, 26; National Educational Policy Standards, 127; National Education Plan, 127–29; patrimonialism and, 52; protest and, 207; quotas and, 26; racism and, 20, 26–28, 157, 159, 171, 176; reform and, 118–19, 122, 127; Rio de Janeiro and, 2; science and, x, 19, 24, 121, 209, 220; SENAC and, 123–24, 250n2; SENAI and, 123–24, 250n2; social inequality and, 111–12, 116, 118–34, 205–7; Statute for the Reform of Primary and Secondary Education in the Municipality of the Court, 119; systematic control of, x; university system and, 2; Vargas and, 122–26
- Education of Youth and Adults (EJA), 131
- Efficiency, 104
- elections: 2018 and, 45, 47–49, 70, 140, 168, 185, 192, 196, 213, 236, 242; Bolsonaro and, 213; bossism and, 45–50; corruption and, 48, 67–69, 90–91, 99, 242; decapitation and, 68–69; demagogues and, 210; democracy and, 47, 203–4, 210–11; family caucus and, 69–71; gender and, 168; Inter-Union Parliamentary Advisory Department (DIAP) and, 69–71; intolerance and, 192, 196; patrimonialism and, 66–73; political parties and, 241–42; quill pen, 68–69; sexism and, 178; Verification Commission and, 68–69; violence and, 140, 185
- Electoral Court, 69
- El Faro, 139
- elitism: agrarian, 4; bossism and, 33, 35, 46, 49–51; corruption and, 77, 80, 88, 91, 101, 106; education and, 162; Grand Compromise and, 50; masters and, 7, 12, 17–18, 32–41, 171; Nazism and, 14; patrimonialism and, 63–67; plantations and, 16, 30–41, 57, 65, 81, 112, 161, 171, 249n3; social inequality and, 113, 120–23; social myopia of, 29
- El Salvador, 135, 139
- emancipation, 4, 19, 62, 159
- Empire: bossism and, 35, 41–43; Brazilian, 4–5, 8, 13, 35, 41–43, 54, 57, 59, 62–63, 65, 81, 83–85, 88–89, 119, 147–48, 186, 248nn1 and 2, 249n1, 249n3; corruption and, 81–85, 88–89; Dom Fernando de Portugal, 59; Dom João I, 58, 61, 81–82; Dom João II, 77; Dom Lourenço de Almeida, 79; Dom Manuel I, 77; Dom Pedro I, 4, 62–63, 83–84, 87, 248n2, 249n1, 249n4, 250n1; Dom Pedro II, 35, 62–66, 84, 88, 146–47, 149, 248n2, 249n3 and 4; Dom Rodrigo de Sousa Courtinho, 59; intolerance and, 186; National Guard and, 42, 66, 249n4; patrimonialism and, 54, 57, 59, 62–66; Political Constitution of the Empire of Brazil and, 62; social inequality and, 119; Theft of the Crown Jewels and, 85–89; Third, 248n2; Vaz de Camões on, 186–87; violence and, 147–48
- empowerment, xi, 68
- Engel, 102
- England, 81
- Enlightenment, 19
- entrepreneurs, 23, 65
- Epicurus, xv
- equality: commitment to, 27–28; commixture and, 6–7, 10, 23; constitutional issues and, 14, 26, 77, 118, 121, 180, 193, 209; distribution of power and, 50; diversity and, 26–28, 51, 153, 179, 185, 198, 211, 228, 233; gender and, 180; inclusion and, 8, 20, 24, 26–27, 50, 121, 127, 145–46, 150, 156–59, 178, 183–86, 195, 209; of income, 44, 111,

- equality (continued)
114; Indigenous peoples and, 12, 14, 153, 183; legal, 107; long-term, 26; protection of, 193; Racial Equality Statute and, 26; rights and, 24 (see also rights); societal recognition of, 156; Special Secretariat for Racial Equality Policy (SEPPIR) and, 25–26; tolerance and, 210; universal, 21; Whites and, 19, 29, 174; women and, 12, 17–18, 113–14, 158, 165, 168, 173–74, 209
- Erdoğan, Recep Tayyip, 202
- Essays in Understanding* (Arendt), 192
- Estado de S. Paulo* (newspaper), 98, 172
- Estado Novo (New State), xix, 122, 126–27, 200
- ethical issues, 53–54, 58, 76, 80, 88, 134, 210–11
- European Union, 112
- Evans-Pritchard, E. E., 217, 221–23
- Evolução política do Brasil e outros estudos* (The political evolution of Brazil and other studies) (Júnior), 56
- evolutionism, 217–19, 223
- execution, 97, 162, 247n1
- exports, 31, 57, 68, 80–81
- Facebook, xi
- Falling Sky, The* (Kopenawa), 232
- family caucus, 69–71
- Faoro, Raymundo, 55, 65–66
- Farage, Nádía, 144
- Farias, Paulo César, 99
- Fausto, Ruy, 204
- Fausto, Sergio, 141
- favelas, 23, 93, 142, 161–64
- favoritism, 43, 87
- Federal Council on Education, 127
- Federal Police, 101–3, 138, 163
- Federal Prosecution Office, 102
- femicide, xxi, 157, 166–67, 173, 175–77, 180, 194, 205, 235
- femininity, 165, 175, 238
- feminism, 25, 168–69, 177, 239
- Fernandes, Florestan, 7
- Fernandes, Millôr, 199
- Fernandes Paranhos Fleury, Sérgio, 97
- Ferreira, Eduardo, 160
- Ferreira Gomes, José Euclides, 46–47
- Ferreira Gomes, Vicente Antenor, 46
- Ferreira Gomes, Vicente César, 46
- Ferrez, Marc, 38–41, 40
- Figueredo Santos, José Alcides, 117–18
- Filho, Laurenço, 122
- First Republic, 13, 20, 43, 68–69, 89–91, 110, 148
- Folha de S. Paulo* (newspaper), 46–47, 196
- Fonseca, Deodoro da, 200
- “Forms of History, The” (Lefort), 224
- foundling wheel, 17
- France, 14, 81, 113
- Franco, Marielle, 161–64
- fraud, 42, 67–68, 90–91, 100, 102, 107
- freedom of expression, xi, 50, 200
- Freedom of Information Act, 136
- Free Fatherland Party (PPL), 70, 242
- Frenchetto, Bruna, 232
- French Revolution, 233
- Freyre, Gilberto, 6–7, 200
- Functional Illiteracy Indicator (INAF), 130
- Fundação Cultural Palmares, 25
- Fundação Getúlio Vargas (FGV), 107, 160–61
- Fundação João Pinheiro, xx
- Fundação Palmares, xii
- Fundamental Law of Education, 118–19
- G1, 43
- Galvão, Ricardo, 12–13
- Garrastazu Médici, Emílio, 96, 98
- gays, 12, 178–85, 195–96, 202, 206, 212
- Gazeta de Notícias* (newspaper), 87
- Geertz, Clifford, 230–31
- Geisel, Ernesto, 92–93

- gender: constitutional issues and, 179–80; democracy and, 185; dictatorship and, 178; discrimination and, 12; education and, 119–21, 129, 162, 175, 177, 182, 184–85; elections and, 168; and femicide, 157, 165–67, 173–78, 180, 194, 205, 235; feminism and, 25, 168–69, 177, 239; inequality and, 164–68, 174; LGBTQ movement and, 178–85, 195, 206, 212; misogyny and, x, 157, 167, 177, 192; murder and, 22, 136, 157–58, 164–67, 173, 175–81, 194, 205, 235; prejudice and, 11; rape and, 17, 29, 157, 168–73, 179, 182, 205; republics and, 185; and rights, 174, 181–85, 193–94; Statute 13104 and, 165–66; torture and, 177, 179–81, 184; transgender people, 12, 178–84; as translation of sex, 165; violence and, 160–68, 160–85. See also masculinity; women
- genealogies, 26, 32, 216
- General Electric, 95
- genital mutilation, 181
- genocide, xii, 7, 22, 145
- Germany, 10, 53, 126, 137, 233–34
- Gini coefficients, 44–45, 114
- Glas, Jorge, 106
- Global Witness, 151
- Glória Public School, 120
- Goebbels, Joseph, xi
- Goiás, 47–49, 93
- gold, 78–80
- Golden Law, 18–19, 248n2
- Goldman, Marcio, 229
- Gomes, Cid, 46–47
- Gomes, Ciro, 46–47
- Gonzalez, Lélia, 168
- Goulart, João (Jango), 93–95
- Grand Compromise, 50
- Grande sertão: veredas* (Rosa), 212
- Grupo Gay da Bahia, 196
- Guarani, 149, 251n1
- Guatemala, 2, 105
- Guimarães Jorge, Ailton, 97
- Guinea, 62
- guns, 50, 136–39, 160, 162
- Haiti, 197
- healthcare: access to, 20, 52, 104, 111, 116–18, 152, 157, 212; Bloodsucker Mafia scandal and, 73; COVID-19 pandemic and, xiv–xv, xvii, 118, 132, 213, 251n1; federal budget and, 72; protest and, 207
- Health Ministry, xiv, 138, 141, 172
- Heckenberger, Michael, 232
- Hegel, Georg Wilhelm, 224
- Historical Metaphors and Mythical Realities* (Sahlins), 229–30
- “History and Anthropology” (Lévi-Strauss), 219–20, 223–26
- History of Brazil* (Salvador), 30
- Hitler, Adolf, 126
- Hobsbawm, Eric, 204–5
- Home for Abandoned Children, 120
- homicide, 22–23, 49, 135–37, 141, 176, 178
- homophobia, 157, 179, 181, 192, 196
- Honduras, 109, 135
- Honorifics Chamber and Registry, 61
- housing, 20, 28, 49, 52, 77, 104, 111, 157, 207
- “How to Write the History of Brazil” (IGHB), 237
- Human Rights Day, 247n1
- Hungary, 14, 202
- Iglesias, José (Jucu), 97
- illiteracy: Additional Act and, 118–19; Consolidation of Labor Laws Decree (CLT) and, 123; Functional Illiteracy Indicator (INAF) and, 130; Law of the Free Womb and, 120; poverty and, 119, 131; reform and, 118–19, 122; rural areas and, 130; slavery and, 118–23; social inequality and, 118–34; Statute for the Reform of Primary and Secondary Education in the Municipality of the Court and, 119; Vargas and, 122–26

- immigrants, 32, 110, 195–96, 203 impalement, 181
imperialism: anthropological view on, 218; bossism and, 36, 38, 248n2; corruption and, 13, 83–88; historical perspective on, 4, 13; patrimonialism and, 64, 67–68; racism and, 20, 161; slavery and, 36, 248n1; social inequality and, 118, 120, 250n1
Imperial Leather (McClintock), 169 income equality, 44, 111, 114 income gap, xx, 112–14, 137 independence, 3–4, 6, 247n1, 248n2
Index of Youth Vulnerability to Violence (IVJ), 158
Indian Protection Service, 149
Indigenous peoples: Andrade on, 6; anthropological view of, 206, 210–11,
221–22, 238–39; Christians and, 147,
187, 211, 239, 251n1; colonialism and,
143–49, 170–71, 187, 232; combined majority and, xxi; decimation of, xiv,
5, 145–50; discrimination against,
12, 14, 183; equality for, 12, 14, 153,
183; European diseases and, 144;
Guarani, 149, 251n1; intolerance and, 187–89; Kachin, 217; Kaingang, 147–49; land rights of, 212; languor of, 146, 238; Mendi, 217; military and, 144; Missionary Council for Indigenous Peoples (CIMI) and,
151–52; modernity and, 238–39;
National Council for Indigenous Policy and, 184; normalization of,
203; nudity of, 169; paganism and,
187–88, 203, 251n4; political parties and, 242; revolt and, 35, 147–48;
rights and, 143, 150–53, 183–84, 212,
242; Romantic Indianism and,
146–48; as savages, 33, 145–48, 188,
228; slavery and, 143–45, 153, 170–71,
187; statistics on, 144–45, 152; Tapuias,
232; Tupinambá, 147, 188, 255n66;
United Nations and, 153; violence and, 143–54; women and, 146–47, 169; Wright on, 232; Xavante, 149
Indigenous Statute, 152 inflation, 93–96
Injustice: The Social Bases of Obedience and Revolt (Moore), 206 insecurity, 10, 140–43, 175
Institute of Applied Economic Research
(IPEA), xx, 21, 114, 135, 158, 171
Instituto Sou da Paz, 136
Inter-American Commission on Human Rights, 179, 181
International Classification of Illnesses (ICD), 142
International Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual,
Trans and Intersex Association–
Latin America and the Caribbean
(ILGA-LAC), 179
International Policy Center for Inclusive Growth, 114
internet, 192, 197
Inter-Union Parliamentary Advisory Department (DIAP), 69–71 intolerance: aversion and, 177, 194, 197, 203; binary narratives and, 190–91;
Catholicism and, 187–88; colonialism and, 186–89; commixture and, 6–7, 10, 23; conservatism and, 195; constitutional issues and, 193; cordiality and, 189–90, 197; corruption and,
190–94; crime and, 178–85, 194, 196;
Crusades and, 187; democracy and,
193–94, 198, 212; dictatorship and,
189, 194; education and, 188, 197–98; elections and, 192, 196; Empire and,
186; femicide and, 157, 165–67, 173–78,
180, 194, 205, 235; Indigenous peoples and, 187–89; justification of, 186–91;
legal issues and, 189, 197; LGBTQ movement and, 178–85; military and,
189, 194; moral issues and, 187,
191–92, 197; murder and, 192, 196; negative framing and, 189–90; patriarchal society and, 189; polarization

- and, 10, 134, 153, 156, 180, 190–95, 198, 203, 210; police and, 186, 196; prejudice and, 192, 196–97; religious, 187–93, 196, 200, 211–12; repudiation and, 194; rights and, 193–97; rural areas and, 186, 189–90; São Paulo and, 196; sexism and, x, 14, 173, 178–85, 192, 235; slavery and, 187–90; Universal Declaration of Human Rights and, 193; Vaz de Camões on, 186–87; Vieira on, 187–88; xenophobia, 195–97
- Iracema* (Alencar), 146
- Iraq, 168
- Isabel (princess), 85–86
- Isaura de Queiroz, Maria, 49
- Islands of History* (Sahlins), 230
- Israel, 14, 202
- Italy, 14, 202
- Jamaica, 172
- Japan, 116
- Jefferson, Roberto, 100
- Jesuits, 35, 147, 187–88, 251n1
- job market, 2, 115–16, 131, 157, 159
- judiciary, 2–3, 105, 208
- justice: anthropological view of, 206–7, 210; corruption and, 83, 86–88, 101–2, 105–8, 249n5; criminal courts and, 23; delayed, 176; distribution of power and, 50; education and, 26; patrimonialism and, 60, 66; public silence and, 185; violence and, 143, 150, 153
- juvenile offenders, 23
- Kachin, 217
- Kaczyński, Jarosław, 202
- Kaingang, 147–49
- Kingdom of Belíndia, 96
- Kingdom of Daomé, 62
- Kirchner, Cristina, 106
- knifings, 181
- Kodamaa, Nelma, 103
- Kopenawa, David, 232, 255n70
- Koselleck, Reinhart, 233–35
- Kotscho, Ricardo, 98
- Kubitschek, Juscelino, 93, 127, 248n3, 249n3
- Kuczynski, Pedro Pablo, 105–6
- Labor Court, 69
- Labor Minister, 98
- Lacerda, Carlos, 92
- landowners: agriculture and, 31 (see also agriculture); aristocracy and, 9, 32–33, 35, 55, 249n3; bossism and, 31–36, 41–42, 50; corruption and, 78, 90; masters and, 7, 12, 17–18, 32–41, 171; National Institute for Land Settlement and Agrarian Reform (INCRA) and, 45, 134; patrimonialism and, 55–56, 61–62, 65, 68–69; plantations and, 16, 30–41, 34, 57, 65, 81, 112, 161, 171, 249n3; power of, x, 9, 31, 34–36, 55–56, 62, 68–69, 90, 112, 174, 249n3; slavery and, 16 (see also slavery); social inequality and, 112, 119; Vale do Paraíba and, 35–36, 39, 40, 63, 65, 249n3; violence and, 13, 139, 145, 149, 174
- Largo do Machado, 120
- latifúndia (farm estates), 30, 55
- Latin American Faculty of Social Sciences, 137
- Latour, Bruno, 233, 235
- Law No. 12711, 26
- Law of the Free Womb, 18, 120
- lawyers, 59, 64, 236
- Leach, Edmund, 217
- Lederman, Rena, 217
- Lefort, Claude, 216, 224–25
- legal issues: arbitrary imprisonment, 247n1; Article 5, 25; corruption, 76, 80–86, 94–110, 249n5; courts and, 2, 26, 54, 57–69, 81–86, 97, 100–108, 119–20, 152, 189, 197, 249n5, 251n1;

- legal issues (continued) equality, 107; intolerance, 189, 197; juvenile offenders, 23; martial law, 200; new populists and, 203; patri-monialism and, 54, 57–69; Political Constitution of the Empire of Brazil and, 62; political parties and, 241; public participation and, 209;
racism and, 25; rights and, 209
(see also rights); slavery and, 16; social inequality and, 119–20, 134;
Statute 13104 and, 165–66; violence and, 138, 142–45, 152–53, 162–63, 165, 167, 180
- legends, 146, 201
- leisure, 18, 52, 111, 165, 168, 176
- Leon Peres, Haroldo, 98
- Levi-Strauss, Claude, 8, 254n48, 255n68;
Boas and, 219, 222; Evans-Pritchard and, 221–23; on the French Revolution,
233; “History and Anthropology,”
219–20, 223–26; Lefort and, 216, 224–25; Mitológicas, 254n54; on modernity, 233; on myth, 222, 229;
Radcliffe-Brown and, 220, 223; Sartre and, 228; The Savage Mind, 228; son ocietal representation, 223–29;
Structural Anthropology, 223, 225–26;
on time, 227–28; on Western society, 219, 224, 227, 229
- Levitsky, Steven, 198
- LGBTQ movement: attempts to neutralize, xiv; censorship and, xiii; crime and, 178–85; discrimination and, 178, 183; films of, xii; framed historical perspective on, 202–3;
Franco murder and, 160–64; as political target, 178–85; São Paulo and, 178, 182; violence and, xxi, 195–97, 206, 212
- liberalism: and forgetting the past, 14;
patrimonialism and, 69–71; political parties and, 70–71, 241, 243; racism and, 19; Social Liberal Party (PSL), 70–71
- liberal professions, 62, 65
- Liberato Barros, José, 119
- liberty, 19–20, 70, 79, 161, 193, 243, 251n1
- Liebgott, Roberto, 151
- life expectancy, 17, 21–22, 96, 157–58
- Ling, Juan, 203–4
- Lisbon, 2, 57, 59–60, 79, 81, 247n1
- Lloyd Brasileiro, 91
- loans, 92, 98
- Lopes, Elias Antônio, 81–82
- Louis XVI, 88
- Lula da Silva, Luiz Inácio, 100, 103, 106
- Lusitanian State, 56–57, 60, 79, 82, 186–87
- Lusotropicalism, 7
- Lutfalla, 98
- Magalhães, Antônio Carlos, 98
- Magalhães, Gonçalves de, 146–47
- Magic Mountain, The* (Mann), 236–37, 239
- Malinowski, Bronislaw, 223
- Maluf, Paulo, 98
- Maluf, Sylvia, 98
- manilha e o libambo, A* (Manillas and shackles) (Costa d Silva), 26
- Mann, Thomas, 236–37, 239
- manual labor, 23, 33, 119
- Maranhão, 45–46, 70
- Maré (favela), 162
- “Marett Lecture” (Evans-Pritchard),
221–22
- Maria da Penha Law, 175–76
- Maria Targini, Francisco Bento, 82
- Marinho, Mauricio, 99–100
- Marín-León, Leticia, 117
- marriage, 32–34, 64, 227
- martial law, 200
- Martinez, Oscar, 139
- masculinity, 41, 158, 165, 175, 238
- massacre, xii, 96, 146–47, 149
- masters, 7, 12, 17–18, 32–41, 171
- Mato Grosso, 49, 151–52
- Mazzili, Ranieiri, 94
- Mbembe, Achille, xii

- McClintock, Anne, 169, 238
Medeiros da Silva, Mário Augusto, 20
Medina, Danilo, 106
Melo Castro, Matheus, 161–62
Memórias de um sargento de milícias
(Memorias of a Militia Sergeant)
(Almeida), 55
Mendes Júnior, 102
Mendi, 217
Mensalão, 100–101, 207 merchants, 32, 61–64, 78–79, 83
Mesa da Consciência e Ordens,
2–3, 60
military, ix; bossism and, 42, 47; Capemi
and, 95; corruption and, 92–97, 161, 163; coups and, 92–95, 199–200;
crime and, 162–63, 194, 207; Death Squadron and, 97; dictatorship and,
12, 92, 95–97, 139, 189, 194, 200, 209, 241–42, 247; gender and, 182;
historical perspective on, 2–3, 200;
Indigenous peoples and, 144; intolerance and, 189, 194; National Guard and, 42, 66, 249; patrimonialism and, 60, 62, 64; Polícia Militar
and, 21, 139, 161–62; racism and, 21,
161; republics and, 200; Rio de Janeiro and, 163; Royal Military Academy and, 2; Second Battalion and, 96–97; slavery and, 16; torture and, 96–97, 247n1; violence and,
139, 149
Minas Gerais, 78–79, 93, 101, 104
minifundia, 44
minimum wage, 46, 116
Minister of Mines and Energy, 98 Ministry for Women, the Family, and Human Rights, 184
Ministry of Agriculture, 122, 150
Ministry of Civic Affairs, 25
Ministry of Culture, 25
Ministry of Health, xiv, 138, 141, 172
Ministry of Human Rights, 183
Ministry of Justice, 150
Ministry of Tourism, xi
Ministry of War and Foreign Affairs, 59
Miquilim, Isabella O. C., 116 misogyny, x, 157, 167, 177, 192
Missionary Council for Indigenous Peoples (CIMI), 151–52
Mistral, Frédéric, 201
mistresses, 84
Mitológicas (Levi-Strauss), 254n54 modernity, 20, 54, 233–39
Molina, Otto Pérez, 105–6 monarchy: commixture and, 6; corruption and, 79, 82–89; Dom Fernando de Portugal, 59; Dom João I, 58, 61,
81–82; Dom João II, 77; Dom
Lourenço de Almeida, 79; Dom
Manuel I, 77; Dom Pedro I, 4, 62–63,
83–84, 87, 248n2, 249n1, 249n4,
250n1; Dom Pedro II, 35, 62–66, 84,
88, 146–47, 149, 248n2, 249nn3 and 4;
Dom Rodrigo de Sousa Courtinho,
59; patrimonialism and, 56–59, 63–66;
Portuguese royal family, 2, 81, 247n1;
privileges granted by, 79; republics around, 1, 3; slavery and, 41, 248n1; support for, 1; Theft of the Crown Jewels and, 85–89 money laundering, 100–106, 207, 249n5
Montaigne, Michel de, 156
Monteiro, John, 232
Monteiro, Maria Inês, 117
Montevideo, 94
Moore, Barrington, Jr., 206
Moors, 187
moral issues: authoritarianism and,
197, 212; corruption and, 76, 80, 86,
96, 106, 108; intolerance and, 187,
191–92, 197; patrimonialism and,
53, 58, 68; racism and, 19–20, 168,
178, 180, 185; religion and, xiii,
204, 209; slavery and, 19; violence
and, 155
Morgan Milá, Marc, 113
Moro, Sérgio, 102
Morrison, Toni, 29 mortality rates, 22, 28, 96, 114, 135, 152

- Movement for Brazilian Democracy (MDB), 47, 102, 104, 241
- Mozambique, 62
- mulattas, 17, 174
- Municipal Human Development Index, xx
- murder/homicide: assassinations, 92, 97, 151, 161–64, 181; data on, 22, 135–37, 140–41, 158, 171, 196; exterminations, 145–50; femicide, xxi, 157, 166–67, 173, 175–77, 180, 194, 205, 235; Franco and, 161–64; gender and, 22, 136, 157–58, 164–67, 173–81, 194, 205, 235; genocide, xii, 7, 22, 145; increase of, 135, 158; intolerance and, 192, 196; massacres, xii, 96, 146–47, 149; racism and, xxi, 22, 166, 176, 205; Statute 13104 and, 165–66; war narratives and, 192; of women, 157, 165–67, 173–77, 180, 194, 205, 235; of youth, 22, 136, 158, 205
- Murilo de Carvalho, José, xx, 75
- Museu Paulista, 149
- Muslims, 212, 231, 248n1
- myth: anthropological view of, 201–3, 211, 222, 229; bossism and, 51; common sense theories and, 10–11, 24, 160; cultural constructions of, 8–12, 15, 156–57, 201–3, 211; democracy and, 7; effects on history of, 8–12, 15, 233–39; Evans-Pritchard on, 222; four assumptions for, 11; genealogies and, 32; intolerance and, 190; Levi-Strauss on, 222, 229; national anthem and, 9–10; of paradise, 11, 110, 186, 201; patrimonialism and, 54; of racial democracy, 7, 15, 29, 185, 211; sexism and, 185; slavery and, 24, 29; von Martius on, 8, 11, 146; Western modernity and, 233–39
- Namibia, 44
- Napoleon, 247n1
- National Commerce Confederation, 123–24
- National Congress, 72, 182, 206, 208
- National Council on Human Rights, 184
- National Council on Women's Rights, 184
- National Council to Combat Discrimination and Promote the Rights of Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual, Transgender People (CNCD/LGBT), 183
- National Council to End Discrimination, 183
- National Day of Black Consciousness, 26
- National Economic Development Bank, 98
- National Educational Policy and Guidelines Statute, 26
- National Educational Policy and Standards, 127
- National Education Plan, 127–30
- National Film Agency, xi
- National Guard, 42, 66, 249, 249n4
- National Household Sample Survey, xx, 112–13, 116–17, 130
- National Indian Foundation (FUNAI), 150
- National Industry Confederation, 107, 123–24
- National Information Services, 97
- National Information System on Public Safety, Prison, and Drugs (SINESP), 140
- National Institute for Colonization and Agrarian Reform, 154
- National Institute for Land Settlement and Agrarian Reform (INCRA), 45, 134
- National Institute for Space Research, xii
- nationalism, 15, 124, 192, 202, 242, 254n50
- National Justice Council, 102
- National Secretariat for Global Protection, 184
- National Secretariat on Policy for Women, 184
- National Truth Commission, 247n1
- National Youth Council, 184

- National Youth Secretariat, 184 natives. See Indigenous peoples
Nature (journal), xii Nazism, xi, 7, 14, 126, 203
necropolitics, xii
Negara: The Theatre State in Nineteenth-Century Bali (Geertz), 230–31 Netherlands, 81
Neves, Aécio, 104–5
“new bronze, the” 6
New Christians, 32, 187, 248n1
New Guinea, 217
New Republic, 25, 42, 90
Nicaragua, 106
Nigeria, 23
Nogueira, Ciro, 71
Nora, Pierre, 14
North Africa, 187, 221
Northeast Railway, 149
Nuer, The (Evans-Pritchard), 217, 221
Numa e a ninfa (Barreto), 110
Nunes Leal, Victor, 68
- OAS, 102, 181
Odebrecht, Marcelo, 102–3
OECD countries, 116
oligarchy, 43, 46–50, 70, 90
Oliveira Cabral Santos Filho, Sérgio de, 104
O mundo que o portugueses criou (The world forged by the Portuguese) (Freyre), 7
On donos do poder: Formação do patronato político brasileiro (The owners of power: the rise of political patronage in Brazil) (Faoro), 55
O Paiz (newspaper), 91
Open Invoice, 104
Operation Calicut, 104
Operation Car Wash, 101–6, 207, 249n5
Operation Efficiency, 104
Operation Old Republic, 91
Operation Open Invoice, 104
Operation Street Peddler, 104
Operation Unfair Play, 104
- Orbán, Viktor, 202
Order of Christ, 61
Order of Saint Benedict of Avis, 61
Order of Santiago, 61
Order of the Rose, 87, 878
Order of the Sword, 61
Ortega, Daniel, 106
Os Lusíadas (The Lusíads) (Vaz de Camões), 186–87
O último tamoio (The last Tamoio) (Amoedo), 147, 148
Overing, Joanna, 217, 232
Oxfam Brazil, 43–45, 111, 113, 115
- Pacification Medal, 97
Paço de São Cristóvão, 65 paganism, 187–88, 203, 251n1
Paiva, Manuel, 87
Palmares, Zumbi dos, 26
Palocci, Antonio, 103
Panama, 105
Pantanal, 213
Pará, 46, 49, 71, 95
paradise, 11, 110, 186, 201
Paraguay, 44, 64, 84, 127, 249nn2 and 4
Paraná, 48, 66, 98, 102–3
Party of Socialism and Liberty (PSOL), 70, 161–62, 243, 251n1 paternalism, 16, 34, 166, 201 patriarchal society: anti-intellectualism and, 202; bossism and, 15, 32–33, 41, 45, 200; family unit and, 179; femicide and, 173–75; idyllic perception of, 10, 201; intolerance and, 189; misogyny and, 167; patrimonialism and, 58; rural, 189; slavery and, 173 patrimonialism: agriculture and, 68; AI 5 decree and, xiv; Almeida on, 55; aristocracy and, 55–58, 61–65; Cândido on, 55; Chamber of Deputies and, 66, 69–73, 84, 87, 94, 104; citizenship and, 52, 69; clientelism and, 52, 54, 69, 73; colonialism and, 54–60, 74; conservatism and, 66–67, 70; constitutional issues and, 55, 62, 69;

- patrimonialism (continued) cordiality and, 54, 56, 189–90, 197;
DaMatta on, 55; democracy and,
70, 74; education and, 52; elections and, 66–73; elitism and, 63–67; Empire and, 54, 57, 59, 62–66; as enemy, 75; ethical issues and, 53–54, 58; expenses of, 60–61; family caucus and, 69–71; Faoro on, 55; historical perspective on, 200; Holanda on, 54; honors and titles bestowed by,
31, 34, 61–65, 81–82, 87; imperialism and, 64, 67–68; Inter-Union Parliamentary Advisory Department (DIAP) and, 69–71; Júnior on, 56; justice and, 60, 66; landowners and,
55–56, 61–62, 65, 68–69; legacy of, 13;
legal issues and, 54, 57–69; liberalism and, 69–71; literature on, 53–54;
Lusitanian State and, 56–57, 60, 79, 82, 187; military and, 60, 62, 64; monarchy and, 56–59, 63–66; moral issues and, 53, 58, 68; patriarchal society and, 58; police and, 66;
Portugal and, 54, 56–63, 65, 249n1; reform and, 66–67; republics and,
52–54, 65–74; rights and, 52, 57, 67,
69; Rio de Janeiro and, 58–62, 65; rural areas and, 55, 62, 65; slavery and,
13, 53, 55, 62, 65; social inequality and,
112; state machine and, 57, 60, 66;
voters and, 66–69, 73; Weber on,
53–54; and yoke-and-oxen vote, 68
- Patriota, 70
- patriotism, 3, 8, 64, 124, 126
- Patriots (PATRI), 242
- Patrocínio, José do, 87
- Paula Lobo, Francisco de, 86
- Pazuello, Eduardo, xiv
- Peixoto, Floriano, 200
- Penha Maia Fernandes, Maria da, 251n2
- People's Constitution (Constitution of 1988), 14, 25, 55, 69, 101, 118, 127, 151–52, 154, 193, 198, 208–9
- “Perfect School, The” (Drummond de Andrade), 134
- Pernambuco, 31, 49, 71
- Perrone-Moisés, Beatriz, 232
- Peru, 95
- Petrobras, 102–3
- Pezão, Luiz Fernando, 104
- Philippine Ordinations, 60
- Philippines, 202
- Pierson, Donald, 7
- Piketty, Thomas, 113
- Planalto [Presidential] Palace, xvii, 72
- plantations: coffee, 31, 35–39, 40, 65, 83–84, 120, 249n3; landowners and,
16, 30–41, 57, 65, 81, 112, 161, 171, 249n3;
latifundia and, 30, 55; masters and,
7, 12, 17–18, 32–41, 171; rubber, 149;
in São Paulo state, 36, 40; sugarcane, 31–33, 48, 57; in Vale do Paraíba,
35–36, 39, 40, 63, 65, 249n3
- Podé. See Podemos
- Podemos (PODE), 70
- Poland, 14, 138, 202
- polarization, 10, 134, 153, 156, 180, 190–95, 198, 203, 210
- police: bossism and, 49; censuring by, xii; corruption and, 86–88, 91, 96–97, 101–3; Death Squadron and, 97;
discrimination and, 159; Federal,
101–3, 138, 163; intolerance and, 186,
196; military, 96–97; patrimonialism
and, 66; racism and, 23–24, 101, 139, 159–63, 172, 181, 205; Second Battalion and, 96–97; violence and, 138–42, 161, 205
- Police Pacification Units, 163
- Polícia Militar, 21, 139, 161–62
- Political Constitution of the Empire of Brazil, 62
- political prisoners, 83, 97, 101, 105, 249n5
- “Politics as a Vocation” (Weber), 74
- Pompa, Cristina, 232
- Pompeia, Raul, 87
- Popular Socialist Party (PPS), 46, 70

- populism, 28, 51, 124, 203–4, 207
- Portella, Iracema, 71
- Porter, William Sydney (O. Henry), 109
- Portugal: bossism and, 30–32; colonialism of, 1 (see also colonialism); corruption and, 75–84; Empire of, 35 (see also Empire); heritage of, 5, 7; historical perspective on, 3; Lisbon, 2, 57, 59–60, 79, 81, 247n1; Lusitanian State and, 56–57, 60, 79, 82, 187; Napoleon and, 247n1; patrimonialism and, 54, 56–63; Philippine Ordinances and, 60; power delegated by, 30; social inequality and, 123, 127; Vaz de Camões and, 186–87
- Portugal, Fernando José de (Marquês de Aguiar), 59
- Portuguese Crown: aristocracy and, 31 (see also aristocracy); bureaucracy of, 2; corruption and, 78–82, 85–86; monarchy and, 4 (see also monarchy); patrimonialism and, 56–61, 65, 249n1; taxes and, 57, 59, 62, 78, 81–82, 100, 104, 115–16; Theft of the Crown Jewels and, 85–89; Vaz de Caminha and, 168, 249n1; violence and, 143
- Portuguese Guinea, 62
- Postal Scandal, 101
- poverty, xx, 10; agribusiness and, 45; Blacks and, 113, 115, 158, 205; bossism and, 45–46; breaking the cycle of, 18; caste and, 18; corruption and, 96; favelas and, 23, 93, 142, 161–64; illiteracy and, 119, 131; racism and, 158, 185; reduction of, 205; social inequality and, 112–15, 119, 131
- Prado family, 46–47, 56
- Pravda*, 14
- prayer, 158
- Prêmio Camões, xi
- pregnancy, 36
- prejudice: class, 33; as crime, 179; intolerance and, 192, 196–97; manual labor and, 33; measurement of, 179; racial, 7, 11, 33, 156, 167, 174, 179, 192, 196–97; reactive, 7; women and, 11, 167, 174
- presentism, 214–15
- Presidential Secretariat for Human Rights, 142, 183, 196
- Príncipe Regente (PR) (prince regent), 60
- prison: corruption and, 83, 97, 101, 103–6, 247n1; drugs and, 97, 140, 142, 163; guards in, 163; incarceration rates and, 23; political prisoners and, 83, 97, 101, 105, 249n5; population data on, 205; racism and, 25, 28, 101, 205; SINESP and, 140
- Program to Reduce Lethal Violence (PRVL), 49
- Progressive Party (PP), 48, 70–72, 102, 242
- Progressive Republican Party (PRP), 70, 242
- progressives, ix, 70, 102, 194, 210, 242, 248n4
- propaganda, 8, 15, 20, 95, 100, 191–92, 203
- propina*, 75–76
- protest, 93, 99, 163, 194–95, 207, 248n2 and 4
- Public Library of Portugal, 76
- public safety, 23, 49, 77, 135, 139–41, 194, 197
- Puerto Rico, 12
- Quadros, Jânio, 93–94
- queer people, 12, 178–85, 195, 206, 211–12
- Queiroz Galvão, 102
- quill pen elections, 68–69
- Quinta da Boa Vista, 81
- quotas, 26
- Race and History* (Levi-Strauss), 222–23
- racial democracy, 7, 15, 24, 27–29
- Racial Equality Statute, 26

- racism: activists and, 24–25, 27, 29, 151, 163; affirmative action and, xiii, 25, 159; apartheid and, 7, 28; aristocracy and, 32; colonialism and, 20, 27, 29; commixture and, 6–7, 10, 23; conservatism and, 25, 28; constitutional issues and, 186; crime and, 24–25, 194, 209; dictatorship and, 24; diversity and, 26–28, 51, 153, 179, 185, 198, 211, 228, 233; education and, 20, 26–28, 157, 159, 171, 176; exclusion and, 20–24, 27–29, 112, 129, 159, 167, 179; femicide and, 157, 166; Freyre on, 6–7; imperialism and, 20, 161; inclusion and, 8, 20, 24, 26–27, 50, 121, 127, 145–46, 150, 156–59, 178, 183–86, 195, 209; income gap and, xx, 137; intolerance and, 161 (see also intolerance); legal issues and, 25; liberalism and, 19; life expectancy and, 158; Maria da Penha Law and, 175–76; military and, 21, 161; moral issues and, 19–20, 168, 178, 180, 185; murder and, 22, 166, 176, 205; myth of racial democracy and, 7, 15, 29, 185, 211; “new bronze” and, 6; NUMAS and, 156–57; police and, 23–24, 101, 139, 159–63, 172, 181, 205; poverty and, xx, 158, 185; prejudice and, 7, 11, 33, 156, 167, 174, 179, 192, 196–97; prison and, 25, 28, 101, 205; quotas and, 26; republics and, 20, 24–25, 160; rights and, 20–28, 158, 162, 168, 174, 177–85, 251n2; and “savages,” 33, 145–48, 188, 228; scientific models and, 19; segregation and, 27, 51, 53, 93, 158; slavery and, 16–29, 159–61, 170–74; social Darwinism and, 19; Special Secretariat for Racial Equality Policy (SEPPPIR) and, 25–26; stereotypes and, 32, 41, 162, 164, 169, 192, 238; violence and, xxi, 139, 144, 148, 159–61, 164–68, 176, 211; women and, 12, 25, 41, 113–15, 121, 129, 157–58, 161–68, 174, 176, 212; and xenophobia, 195–97; youth and, 21–22
- Radcliffe-Browne, A. R., 220, 223
- Raízes do Brasil (The Roots of Brazil)* (Buarque de Holanda), xix, 34, 54, 189–90
- Ramos, Alcida, 232
- Ramos, Artur, 7
- rape: culture of, 17, 157, 168–73; data on, 171–72; violence and, 17, 29, 157, 168–73, 179, 182, 205, 247n1
- rebellion, 5, 12, 18, 35–38, 62, 118, 144, 148, 188
- reform: bossism and, 50; Capanema Reform, 122; constitutional issues and, 209; education and, 118–19, 122, 127; fake news and, 204; illiteracy and, 118–19, 122, 130; National Educational Policy and Standards and, 127; National Institute for Land Settlement and Agrarian Reform (INCRA) and, 45, 134; patrimonialism and, 66–67; Saraiva Reform, 67; social inequality and, 118–19, 122; Statute for the Reform of Primary and Secondary Education in the Municipality of the Court and, 119; Vargas and, 122–26; violence and, 154
- Rêgo, Veneziano do, 70
- religion: Afro-Brazilian, 212; anthropological view of, 228, 234; Catholicism, 3, 32, 67, 78, 120, 187, 251n1; Christians, xiii, 32, 70, 187, 191, 211, 239, 248n1; community of origin and, 155; intolerance and, 187–93, 196, 200, 211–12; Maria da Penha Law and, 175–76; modernity and, 239; moral issues and, xiii, 204, 209; Muslims, 212, 231, 248n1; paganism, 187–88, 203, 251n1; political parties and, 70, 242; prayer and, 158; prejudice and, 11; rape culture and, 173; slavery and, 16, 18; social inequality and,

- 120; ultranationalism and, 202;
women and, 173, 176, 179
- Repórter Brasil, 44–45
- Report on Homophobic Violence in Brazil, 181
- Republican Party (PR), 70, 183
- Republican Party of the Social Order (PROS), 70, 242
- Republicans (PRB), 70, 243
- republics: banana, 109; bossism and, 30, 41–43, 49; constitution and, 14, 25, 69, 84, 90, 101, 121, 150; corruption and, 75, 84, 89–92, 98, 101, 106, 109–10; Empire and, 4 (see also Empire); First Republic, 13, 20, 43, 68–69, 89–91, 110, 148; gender and, 185; military, 200; monarchy and, 4; New Republic, 25, 42, 90; patrimonialism and, 52–54, 65–74; polarization and, 210; political parties and, 242; racism and, 20, 24–25, 160; Salvador on, 30; Second Republic, 24; sexism and, 185; social inequality and, 111, 121; spirit of, 210–11; Brazil surrounded by, 1, 3; Third Republic, 98, 101, 151; violence and, 148–51, 154
- Research Group on Social Markers of Difference (NUMAS), 156–57
- Revista Ilustrada* (newspaper), 88
- revolt, 35, 147–48, 206
- Ribeiro, Aguinaldo, 72
- Ribeiro, Daniella, 70, 72
- Richa, Beto, 48
- rights: AI 5 decree and, xiv; anthropological view of, 200, 205–32; bossism and, 37, 50–51; constitutional issues and, 25, 62, 69, 83–84, 90, 118, 143, 151–54, 193, 200, 207–10; corruption and, 75, 80, 83; democracy and, 27, 50, 185, 193–94, 205–6, 210; to freedom, 50, 176, 193, 200, 209; gender, 158, 162, 168, 174, 177–85, 193–94, 251n2; Human Rights Day, 247n1; Indigenous, 143, 145, 150–54, 183–84, 206, 212, 242; Inter-American Commission on Human Rights, 181; intolerance and, 193–97; Ministry for Women, Family, and Human Rights, 184; Ministry of Human Rights, 183; National Council on Human Rights, 184; patrimonialism and, 52, 57, 67, 69; political parties and, 242; Presidential Secretariat for Human Rights, 142, 183; protest and, 207; racism and, 20–28, 158, 162, 168, 174, 177–85, 251n2; of reply, 209; reversal of, xiii; SaferNet and, 197; social inequality and, 112, 118; Universal Declaration of Human Rights, 193; violence and, 142–43, 148–54
- Rights of Indigenous People, 153
- Rio de Janeiro, 125; Brazilian Historical and Geographical Institute (IHGB) and, 3–4, 8; as capital, 4; corruption and, 78, 81, 89, 94–96, 103–4; education and, 2; Maré favela in, 162; militias and, 163; patrimonialism and, 58–62, 65; royal family in, 58; slavery and, 19; social inequality and, 120, 250n1; Vale do Paraíba, 35–36, 39, 40, 63, 65, 249n3; violence and, 49, 147, 148, 160, 172
- Rio de la Plata, 78, 128
- Rio Grande do Norte, 47, 49, 71, 136, 167
- Rio-Niterói bridge, 95
- Rio Olympics, 93
- Rio Seco, 82
- rituals, 3, 33–34, 36, 83, 124–26, 175, 190, 202, 216, 230
- robberies, 140–43
- Rodrigues Corrêa Filho, Heleno, 117
- Rodrigues de Sá e Meneses, João (Viscount of Anada), 59
- Romantic Indianism, 146–48
- Romeiro, Adriana, 79
- Romero, Silvío, 6
- Rondon, Cândido Mariano, 149
- Rosa, Guimarães, 212

- Rousseff, Dilma, ix, 105–6, 195, 207, 241, 243, 248n4, 249n5
- Royal Academy of Painting and Sculpture, 2
- Royal Botanic Garden, 2
- royal family, 2, 58, 81, 247n1
- Royal Library, 2
- Royal Military Academy, 2
- Royal Museum, 2
- Royal Press, 2
- Royal School of the Sciences, Arts, and Crafts, 2
- rubber, 149
- rural areas: bossism and, 33–34, 41–46, 49–51; corruption and, 90; illiteracy and, 130; intolerance and, 186, 189–90; landowners and, 174 (see also landowners); latifundia and, 30, 55; patriarchal society and, 173; patrimonialism and, 55, 62, 65; social inequality and, 116, 130; urbanization and, 68; violence in, 143–55
- Rwanda, 105
- SaferNet, 197
- Sahlins, Marshall, 217, 229–30, 252n11
- Sales, Alberto, 89
- Sales, Campos, 89
- Salvador, 2, 4
- Salvador, Vicente do, 30
- Salvini, Matteo, 202
- Santa Catarina, 91, 136
- Santana, 120
- Santos, Reginaldo, 160
- Santos Filho, Joel, 99
- São Cristóvão Palace, 85
- São José school, 120
- São Paulo: corruption in, 97–98, 107, 249n5; Fernandes group and, 7; intolerance in, 196; LGBTQ people in, 178, 182; plantations and, 36, 40; political parties and, 243; protests in, 248n4; racism and, 160; taxes and, 115; violence in, 136, 139, 147–48, 172, 251n1
- São Paulo Federation of Industries (FIESP), 107
- São Sebastião School, 120
- Saraiva Reform, 67
- Sarmanho, Valder, 94
- Sarney, José, 45–46
- Sarney, Roseana, 45–46
- Sarney Filho, 46
- Sartre, Jean-Paul, 228
- Saudi Arabia, 105, 168
- Savage Mind, The* (Levi-Strauss), 228
- savages, 33, 145–48, 188, 228
- scandals: Bingos, 101; bionic governors and, 97–98; Bloodsucker Mafia, 73; Budget Midgets, 73; Capemi, 95; Car Wash, 101–6, 207, 249n5; corruption and, 16, 73, 92, 95, 97–98, 100–101, 104, 107, 110, 172, 207; and cost of capital, 93; Dantas, 100–101; Jefferson and, 100; Marinho and, 99–100; Mensalão, 101, 207; Postal, 101; public money and, 107–8; Theft of the Crown Jewels, 85–89; Tonelero Street incident, 92; Última Hora and, 92; unreported crime and, 172; Veja and, 100
- science, x, xiii, 4–11, 19, 24, 121, 146, 159–60, 209, 220
- Second Republic, 24
- Seeger, Anthony, 189
- segregation, 27, 51, 53, 93, 158
- self-enrichment, 76–79, 103–4
- SENAC, 123–24, 250n2
- SENAI, 123–24, 250n2
- Sergipe, 46, 49, 136
- “Sermon of the Holy Spirit” (Vieira), 187–88
- Serviço Unificado de Saúde (SUS), 116
- Sexagenarian Law, 18
- sexism: elections and, 178; femicide and, 157, 165–67, 173–78, 180, 194, 205, 235; femininity and, 165, 175, 238;

- intolerance and, x, 14, 173, 178–85, 192, 235; LGBTQ movement and, 178–85, 195, 206, 212; Maria da Penha Law and, 175–76; masculinity and, 41, 158, 165, 175, 238; republics and, 185; violence and, 160–85
- slavery: abolition of, 12, 18–19, 25, 28, 69, 118, 159, 248n2; Blacks and, 1, 12, 17, 23, 26, 62, 65, 78, 80, 118, 143–44, 170; bossism and, 31–43; Camargo on, xii; Catholicism and, 16; children and, 17–18; colonialism and, x, 20, 31, 35, 38, 55, 112, 170–71, 174, 200; constitution and, 25, 118, 121, 200, 209; corruption and, 78–81; emancipation and, 4, 19, 62, 159; escape from, 16, 25, 36–37; Fernandes on, 7; Freyre on, 6–7; Golden Law and, 18–19; “humane,” 16–17; illiteracy and, 118–23; imperialism and, 248n1; Indigenous peoples and, 143–45, 153, 170–71, 187; ingrained nature of, 16; intolerance and, 187–90; Law of the Free Womb and, 18, 120; legacy of, 7, 13; legal issues and, 16; and life expectancy, 16–17; as local custom, 16; manuals on, 36–38; Martius on, 8; masters and, 7, 12, 17–18, 32–41, 34, 171; military and, 16; monarchy and, 41, 248n1; moral issues and, 19; as natural, 249n3; patriarchal society and, 173; patrimonialism and, 13, 53, 55, 62, 65; pervasiveness of, 16; plantations and, 16, 30–41, 57, 65, 81, 112, 161, 171, 249n3; racism and, 16–29, 159–61, 170–74; and rebellion, 5, 12, 18, 35–38, 62, 118, 144; religion and, 16, 18; runaways from, 17–18, 144, 153; Sexagenarian Law and, 18; social Darwinism and, 19; social inequality and, 7, 112, 118–23; violence and, 1, 5, 12, 16–18, 139, 143–45, 153, 161, 171, 174; of women, 12, 17–18, 25, 29, 36, 41, 147, 161, 174
- Slaves on a Coffee Plantation in the Vale do Paraíba Region* (Ferrez), 40
- Slave Voyages, 12
- Social Christian Party (PSC), 70, 243
- social Darwinism, 19
- Social Democratic Party (PSD), 47, 70–71, 102, 243
- social inequality: being accustomed to, 9; Blacks and, 113–18, 121, 129, 131; bossism and, 34, 43–45, 51; children and, 115, 119–20, 123, 126–27, 132–34; citizenship and, 118, 121, 134; civic pride and, 124–27; colonialism and, 111–12, 118, 132; combatting, 14, 211; commixture and, 6–7, 10, 23; concentration of, 200; constitutional issues and, 116, 118, 121, 127; corruption and, 77, 112; democracy and, 133; dictatorship and, 126; education and, 111–12, 116, 118–34, 205–7; elitism and, 113, 120–23; Empire and, 119; exclusion and, 20–24, 27, 29, 112, 129, 159, 167, 179; gender and, 119–21 (see also gender); illiteracy and, 118–34; imperialism and, 118, 120, 250n1; inclusion and, 8, 20, 24, 26–27, 50, 114, 121, 127, 145–46, 150, 156–59, 178, 183–86, 195, 209; income gap and, 112–13; institutionalized, 18; intolerance and, 251n1; landowners and, 112, 119; legal issues and, 119–20, 134; markers for, 16, 156–59, 164; National Household Sample Survey and, xx, 112–13, 116–17, 130; opportunity and, 111; Oxfam Brazil reports on, 43, 45, 111, 113, 115; patrimonialism and, 112; persistence of, 111; Portugal and, 123, 127; poverty and, 112–15, 119, 131; prevalence of, 111–12; racism and, 158 (see also racism); reform and, 118–19, 122; religion and, 120; republics and, 111, 121; rights and, 112, 118; Rio de Janeiro and, 120, 250n1; rural areas and, 116, 130;

- social inequality (continued)
  scientific justification for, 121; segregation and, 27, 51, 53, 93, 158; slavery and, 7, 112, 118–23; Statute for the Reform of Primary and Secondary Education in the Municipality of the Court and, 119; structural, 186; violence and, 142, 153, 157–61, 166, 169, 171, 174–75, 180–82, 185; Whites and, 113–18, 129; women and, 113–16, 121, 129, 147, 157–58; youth and, 119, 126, 131, 133
- Socialism and Liberty Party (PSOL), 70, 161, 243
- Social Liberal Party (PSL), x, 70–71, 243
- social media, xi, 50, 164, 197
- Sole Regency, 250n1
- Solidarity (SD), 70
- South Africa, 7, 28
- Spain, 14
- Spanish flu, xv, xviii
- Special Secretariat for Racial Equality Policy (SEPPIR), 25–26
- Special Secretariat for Social Communication, xii
- Special Secretariat of Culture, 25
- State Decree No. 55588/10, 182
- Statute 13104, 165–66
- Statute for the Reform of Primary and Secondary Education in the Municipality of the Court, 119
- stereotypes, 32, 41, 162, 164, 169, 192, 238
- stoning, 181
- Street Peddler, 104
- Structural Anthropology* (Levi-Strauss), 223, 225–26
- structuralism, 133, 221, 223, 225–30
- sugarcane, 31–33, 48, 57
- suicide, 18, 92, 152
- Superior Electoral court, xxi–xxii
- sustainability, 114, 153
- Sweden, 23
- Tapuias, 232
- Targeted Plan, 94, 249n3
- taxes, 57, 59, 62, 78, 81–82, 100, 104, 115–16
- Teixeira, Miro, 100
- Telemig Celular, 100–101
- Temer, Michel, 106, 183
- Teresa Cristina (empress), 85
- theft, 77, 85–89, 140–41
- Theft of the Crown Jewels, 85–89
- Third Republic, 98, 101, 151
- Thirteenth Federal District Court, 102
- Timor Leste, 105
- titles, 31, 34, 61–65, 81–82, 87
- Tocqueville, Alexis de, 206
- Tonelero Street incident, 92
- Torres, Alberto, 89–90
- torture: constitution and, 209; corruption and, 96–97; dictatorship and, 247n1; gender and, 177, 179–81, 184; military and, 96–97, 247n1
- totalitarianism, xx
- Trans-Amazonian highway, 95–96
- transgender people, 12, 178–85, 195, 206, 212
- Transitional Constitutions Provisions, 25
- transportation, 20, 28, 49, 52, 72, 77, 104, 111, 207, 248n4
- Tribunal da Relação, 2
- Trouillot, Michel-Rolph, 214–15
- Trump, Donald, xiv, xvii, 202
- Truth Commission, ix, 247n1
- Tupi, 146–47, 251n1, 255n67
- Tupinambá, 147, 188, 255n66
- Turkey, 202
- Última Hora* (news magazine), 92
- unemployment, 59, 69, 114, 142, 193, 206
- UNESCO, 7
- Unfair Play, 104
- UNICEF, 49
- Unified Black Movement, 24–25
- Union of Men of Color, 24
- United Kingdom, 115–16, 218, 220, 223, 241
- United Nations Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous People, 153

- United Nations Development Program, xx, 114
- United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC), 141
- United States, 12, 14, 17, 28, 95, 113, 172, 202, 241
- Universal Declaration of Human Rights, 193
- University of Brasília, 26
- University of Rio de Janeiro, 163, 248n3
- University of São Paulo (USP), 156, 248n3
- urbanization, 68
- Urgent Care Post, 161
- Ustra, Brilhante, ix
- UTC Engenharia, 102
- Vale do Paraíba, 35–36, 39, 40, 63, 65, 249n3
- Valentim, Delano, xiii
- Valério, Marcos, 100–101
- Vargas, Getúlio, xix, 242; bossism and, 46, 200; Brazilian Black Front and, 24; corruption and, 92, 94, 107; Fundação Getúlio Vargas (FGV) and, 107, 160–61; religion and, 196; Sarmanho and, 94; social inequality and, 122–126; suicide of, 92
- Varnhagen, Francisco, 218
- Vaz de Caminha, Pero, 77, 168, 249n1
- Vaz de Camões, Luis, 186–87
- Vêja* (magazine), 100
- Venezuela, 44, 202
- Verification Commission, 68–69
- Vernant, 232
- Veyne, Paul, 254n50
- Vianas, 48
- Vichy regime, 14, 81, 113
- Vieira, Antônio, 187–88
- vigilantes, 163
- Vilhena Vieira, Oscar, 207–8
- Villa-Lobos, Heitor, 124
- violence: 2015 Violence Map, 166; activists and, 151; Alagoas and, 136; Atlas of Violence, 135–37, 171; Blacks and, xii, xxi, 1, 161, 164–68, 171, 196–97, 204; bossism and, 49–50; Catholicism and, 147, 251n1; children and, 138, 142, 145, 152, 171; colonialism and, 143–46, 154, 168–74, 187, 251n1; constitutional issues and, 140, 143, 150–54; corruption and, 142; democracy and, 155; dictatorship and, 139; Disarmament Statute and, 137; domestic, 161, 175, 251n2; elections and, 140, 185; Empire and, 147–48; exterminations, 145–50; Franco murder, 161–64; gender and, 160–85; guns and, 50, 136–39, 160, 162; Index of Youth Vulnerability to Violence (IVJ) and, 158; Indigenous peoples and, 143–54; insecurity and, 140–43; justice and, 143, 150, 153; landowners and, 13, 139, 145, 149, 174; legal issues and, 138, 142–45, 152–53, 162–63, 165, 167, 180; LGBTQ movement and, xxi, 178–85, 195–97, 206, 212; Maria da Penha Law and, 175–76; military and, 139, 149; moral issues and, 155; police and, 138–42, 161, 205; Portuguese Crown and, 143; Program to Reduce Lethal Violence (PRVL) and, 49; racial, xxi, 139, 144, 148, 159–61, 164–68, 176, 211; reform and, 154; republics and, 148–51, 154; repudiation of, 194; revolt and, 35, 147–48, 206; rights and, 142–43, 148–54, 150, 153–54; Rio de Janeiro and, 49, 147, 148, 160; rural areas and, 143–55; São Paulo and, 136, 139, 147–48, 172, 251n1; Sergipe and, 46, 49, 136; SINESP and, 140; slavery and, 1, 5, 12, 16–18, 139, 143–45, 153, 161, 171, 174; social inequality and, 142, 153, 157–61, 166, 169, 171, 174–75, 180–82, 185; statistics on, 135–38, 141, 171; Statute 13104 and, 165–66; stoning, 181; theft and, 141; urban, 140–43;

- violence (continued)
voters and, 140–43; Whites and, 139, 144, 148; women and, xxi, 147, 160–85, 204–5; youth and, 136, 157–61, 158, 166–67, 205. See also assassinations; bullying; execution; femicide; genocide; homicide; massacre; murder; rape; torture
- Violence Research Group, 163
- Vital do Rêgo, Veneziano, 72
- Viveiros de Castro, Eduardo, 188, 232
- von Humboldt, Alexander, 32
- von Ihering, Hermann, 149
- von Martius, Karl, 4–11, 146, 159–60
- voters: bossism and, 42–43; corruption and, 90, 94, 104; patrimonialism and, 66–69, 73; Verification Commission and, 68–69; violence and, 140–43; yoke-and-oxen vote, 68. See also elections
- Wagner, Richard, xi
- Weber, Max, 53–54, 74
- Western society: anthropological view and, 18–19, 81, 215, 218–19, 224, 227–39; Evans-Pritchard on, 217, 221–23; Lévi-Strauss on, 219, 224, 227, 229; modernity and, 233–39; technology and, 218
- WhatsApp, 160
- Whites: and bossism, 32, 41; and equality, 19, 29, 174; Freyre on, 6–7; and homicide, 22; and income gap, xx, 137; intellectual capacity of, 20; life expectancy of, 158; and marriage, 174; population data on, 21; and poverty, xx; and power, 9, 24, 28; and racism, 20 (see also racism); and social class, 27; and social Darwinism, 19; and social inequality, 113–18, 129; and stereotypes, 32, 169, 238; and violence, 139, 144, 148, 166–67, 176; and women, 41, 113–15, 129, 157, 166–67, 174, 176. See also colonialism; elitism
- women: Black, 12, 25, 41, 113–15, 121, 129, 157–58, 161–68, 174, 176, 212; bossism and, 32, 36–37, 41, 44; and crime, 17, 29, 57, 157, 162–73, 176–82, 205, 209, 247n1; discrimination against, 12; and equality, 12, 17–18, 113–14, 158, 165, 168, 173–74, 209; historical perspective on, 202–3; languor of, 146, 238; Law of the Free Womb and, 18, 120; lesbians, 12, 162, 164, 178–85, 195, 206, 212; Maria da Penha Law and, 175–76; and marriage, 32–34, 64, 227; Ministry for Women, the Family, and Human Rights, 184; and misogyny, x, 157, 167, 177, 192; mulatta, 17, 174; and murder, 157, 165–67, 173, 175–77, 180, 194, 205, 235; National Council on Women's Rights, 184; National Secretariat on Policy for Women, 184; native, 146–47, 169; and nudity, 169; patriarchal society and, 167, 173–75; political representation by, 168, 206; and pregnancy, 36; prejudice against, 11, 167, 174; and race, 12, 25, 41, 113–15, 121, 129, 157–58, 161–68, 174, 176, 212; and rape, 17, 29, 157, 168–73, 179, 182, 205; and religion, 173, 176, 179; and rights, 168, 174, 177, 182, 184, 212, 251n2; and slavery, 12, 17–18, 25, 29, 36, 41, 147, 161, 174; and social inequality, 113–16, 121, 129, 147, 157–58; Statute 13104 and, 165–66; surrender by, 17, 147, 169, 175; transgender, 12, 180, 182; violence against, xxi, 147, 160–85, 204–5; White, 41, 113–15, 129, 157, 166–67, 174, 176. See also femicide; feminism
- Women's Support Hotline, 172–73
- Workers' Party (PT), 48, 70–71, 100–103, 106, 241–43, 248n4
- World Health Organization (WHO), 49, 135, 137, 141, 142, 176
- World War I era, xv, 237

- World War II era, 7
- Wright, Robin, 232
- Xavante, 149
- xenophobia, 195–97
- Yemen, 22
- yoke-and-oxen vote, 68
- Youssef, Alberto, 103
- youth: education and, 131, 133 (see also education); Index of Youth Vulnerability to Violence (IVJ) and, 158; juvenile offenders, 23; murder of, 22, 136, 158, 205; National Youth Council and, 184; National Youth Secretariat and, 184; racism and, 21–22; social inequality and, 119, 126, 131, 133; violence and, 136, 157–61, 167, 205
- Youth Party, 242
- Youth Violence Vulnerability Index, 166
- Zambia, 105
- Ziblatt, Daniel, 198