

CONTENTS

Foreword by Mustafa Akyol xi

Preface xv

Acknowledgments xix

Introduction	1
I The Historical Context	8
A Jewish Kingdom in Arabia	10
Between Arabia and the Holy Land	12
The Jewish Presence in the Hejaz in the Beginning of Islam	14
Which Judaism Did Muhammad Know in Arabia?	17
Arab Jewish Poets before Islam	20
The Arabs and Palestine before Islam	22
The First Muslim Community and the Jews of Medina	23
II The Representation of Judaism and Jews in the Qur'an	27
The Various Names Given the Jews in the Qur'an	28
The Children of Israel, a Chosen People	30

viii CONTENTS

God's Covenant with the People of Israel	35
From Egypt to the Holy Land	38
The Torah as Confirmation of the Qur'an	40
Unruly and Rebellious Children	41
Idolators and Worshippers of the Golden Calf	42
The Figure of 'Uzayr	44
Falsifiers of the Torah	49
Killers of Prophets	51
"Transformed into Apes and Pigs"	54
The Hadith of Stones and Trees	55
The "Ass Carrying Books"	56
III Biblical Accounts and Their Transformations in the Qur'an	58
The Hebrew Vocabulary of the Qur'an	59
The Qur'an and Genesis	60
Cain and Abel	63
Abraham	65
Joseph	70
David	75
Saul/Talut	80
The Red Heifer (al-baqara)	83
The Midrash and the isra'iliyyat	85
IV Qur'anic Law and Jewish Law	88
The Laws of Prayer and qibla	92
The Laws of Fasting	97

CONTENTS ix

	Dietary Laws	102
	The Calendar and the Embolismic Year	104
	Conclusion	107
V	The Qur'anic Sources of the Dhimma	109
	The Pact of 'Umar	112
	A Long Codification	117
	Between Theory and Reality	118
	From Modernity to Fundamentalism	119
VI	The Place of Judaism and the Jews in Twelver Shi'ism	121
	The Impurity of the ahl al-kitab	122
	Social Relations	125
	The Origins of Shi'i Rigorism	127
	Children of Israel: Prototypes and Evidence for the Pre-Existence of the Shi'a	130
	Conclusion	137
	Notes	141
	Bibliography	151
	Index	159

Introduction

THE PRESENT WORK seeks to consider the nature of the affinities between Islam and Judaism. To do so, it is indispensable to return to the sources—that is, to the issues at play in the Qur’an itself. As it is neither possible nor fair to consider the Qur’an in isolation from the literature to which it gave rise, however, I will also as far as possible consider the Islamic religious literature that draws its inspiration from the Qur’an: the oral tradition attributed to the Prophet of Islam, known as the Ḥadith; the commentaries on the Qur’an; the Islamic polemical literature against Judaism, and so on. The same dynamic characterizes Judaism, for the written and oral Torah are also inextricably mixed. Very often, it is impossible to understand Qur’anic text and context without appealing to the post-Qur’anic tradition. At the very least, this oral tradition allows us to grasp how, at various periods, Muslims understood the Qur’an. This is why all of this book’s chapters call upon post-Qur’anic sources to varying degrees.

I have attempted to account for the Qur’anic relationship to the Jews across all of its shades and gradations, from the brightest to the most somber. Jews, their religion and their Holy Scriptures are quite frequently mentioned in the Qur’an. It recounts many well-known biblical episodes in close detail, some of them more than once. These include: the history of the Patriarchs; the servitude of the children of Israel in the land of Pharaoh; their departure from Egypt; their arrival and settling of the Holy Land; and the giving of the Torah. One also finds references to various miracles that occurred to the children of Israel during their time in the desert: the pillar of cloud that accompanied them; the manna from heaven; the quail that fell from the sky; and the water that sprang forth from a rock to slake the people's thirst.

The biblical figures whose stories are mentioned several times include those of Abraham and his family; Lot and his kin; Moses and the children of Israel's suffering in Egypt; and, in passing, the story of the scouts sent by Moses before entering the Promised Land; David and Solomon, Jonah (Yunus), also called Dhu l-nun (the man of the fish), Job (Ayyub), and many others.

It is not only the voices of the Bible's heroes that we hear in the Qur'an. Faith and law—public, private, and religious—all occupy a very prominent place in the text and all show extensive evidence of cross-pollination with Biblical and other Jewish sources. These we will discuss later.

First let us consider the extent and depth of the ties joining the Qur'an to the Bible and postbiblical Judaism, a question that has of course been much debated by scholars. In this book, I shall present the historical and cultural context in which Islam emerged by describing in detail Judaism as it was practiced by the Jews of Arabia at the time Muhammad began his prophetic career. As recounted by Muslim tradition, this period spanned twelve years, from 610 to 622, and follows Muhammad from Mecca, his birthplace, to Yathrib, later known as al-Madina (Medina). Muhammad is said to have come into contact with Jews primarily in Medina and its surroundings, where he was active during the last ten years of his life, from 622 to 632. It was there that he learned their religion and history.

The book will first present the historical background of the encounter between Jews and Arabs in the centuries preceding the advent of Islam, mainly as related by Arab sources, and will later explore early relations between Jews and Muslims. We will then look at the image of Jews and Judaism presented by the Qur'an.

We shall begin by examining the terminology and various names by which the Qur'an refers to Jews. I shall identify the characteristics of each of these names and what they tell us about how the Jews and their religion were regarded. Three terms will receive particular attention: banu isra'il (the children of Israel, al-yahud (Jews) and ahl al-kitab (the People of the Book).

I will then note the various, contradictory ways in which the Qur'an depicts Jews and their religion. On the one hand, there are the positive declarations: the Israelites are presented as the chosen people upon whom God lavished his kindness, freeing them from slavery in Egypt, bestowing upon them the Torah, creating prophets in their midst, and leading them to the Promised Land. On the other hand, they are presented as a people that broke its Covenant with God, reverted to idolatry, falsified the God-given Torah, and killed the prophets sent to restore them to the straight and narrow path. In short, a people who, by virtue of having broken their Covenant with God, were unworthy of alliance: "O you who believe, do not take the Jews and Christians as friends. They are friends of each other" (Q. 5:51).<sup>1</sup>

The last two chapters, in particular, call for an additional word of explanation. Devoted to the "Qur'anic foundations of the legal status of Jews under Islamic domination," Chapter 5 might at first glance seem a doubtful fit in this book to the degree that it concerns politico-theological developments that took place after the Qur'anic source had achieved its final form. Its inclusion is nevertheless justified by the fact that this process, though not "Qur'anic" in itself, drew upon Qur'anic verses in elucidating the legal status of Jews and other religious minorities. The same goes for Chapter 6, devoted to "the place of Judaism and Jews in Twelver Shi'ism": while it is true that these are late developments in Islam, they appeal to notions that are in fact discussed in the Qur'an itself. This closing chapter also allows us to move beyond a strictly Sunni majoritarian vantage point to encompass the Shi'i world that, minoritarian though it may be, is none the less powerful. It is estimated that the various Shi'i branches count 150 million followers, or a tenth of the world's Muslim population; and within Shi'ism, the Twelver branch occupies by far the majority position today.

This book seeks to reveal the extent to which the two religions are inextricably entwined—at once close and distant, friendly and hostile. This ambivalence lies at the heart of Islam's relationship to Judaism and the Jews, and it assumes several aspects that are worth exploring. It may be detected in the Qur'an's complex attitude toward the Bible. On the one hand, the Qur'an sees the Bible as a text revealed by God to the human race and thus as a book capable of authenticating the revelation offered Muhammad in the Qur'an, as both have the same divine source. On the other hand, the Qur'an sees the Bible as a book given the Jews that lost its value after they knowingly altered it, among other reasons so as to remove all references to the future advent of Muhammad and the new religion he would bring into the world. It goes without saying that the Bible's falsification renders it inferior to the Qur'an, which is considered to be the authentic word of God. In other words, the Jews are as much

People of the Book (ahl al-kitab) as they are “an ass carrying books” (Q. 62:5)—that is, a people bearing an immense heritage on their shoulders but of which they are ignorant and which, in reality, they do not deserve.

The Qur’an’s ambiguity vis-à-vis the biblical (and post-biblical) heritage is also evident in Qur’anic law. Everything that concerns prayer, fasting, dietary rules, purity, and impurity bears a clear relation to the Bible and post-biblical Jewish sources. Yet one also observes many laws that exhibit a deliberate desire to draw away from Judaism. Among the most striking examples, one may note the decision to shift the direction of prayer (qibla) from Jerusalem to Mecca, changes to the fasting (ṣawm) and dietary laws, and revisions to the calendar, a subject we will revisit.

The links between the Qur’an and the Bible have been noted from the earliest days of Islamic studies and the pioneering work of Abraham Geiger, best known as a founding father of the Jewish reformist movement in Germany. In 1833, he published his study, Was hat Mohammed aus dem Judenthume aufgenommen? (translated as, Islam and Judaism), in Bonn. A large number of scholars have followed his lead. I will only cite a few of them here, all of whom devoted major studies to the ties between Judaism and Islam. In his book, Koranische Untersuchungen (Qur’anic Studies), which appeared in Berlin and Leipzig in 1926, Josef Horowitz identified the various passages where the Qur’an and the biblical and post-biblical sources intersect. In Die biblischen Erzählungen im Qoran (Biblical Stories in the Qur’an), published in Hildesheim in 1961, Heinrich Speyer noted the many parallels between accounts in the Qur’an and those in the Bible and Talmudic literature. In the same vein, one may cite David Sidersky, Les Origines des légendes musulmanes dans le Coran et les vies des prophètes (“The Origins of Muslim Legends in the Qur'an and the Lives of the Prophets").<sup>2</sup>

Closer to our times, one may mention the many articles by Sidney Griffith and, more particularly, his book, The Bible in Arabic: The Scriptures of the "People of the Book" in the Language of Islam, as well as the work of Uri Rubin, especially his Between Bible and Qur'an.<sup>3</sup> A major contribution was Jacqueline Chabbi's Le Coran décrypté, Figures bibliques en Arabie (Paris, 2008). Daniel Sibony authored a general study, Coran et Bible en questions et réponses (Paris, 2017), and most recently we have Gabriel S. Reynolds' book, The Qur'an and the Bible: Text and Commentary (New Haven, 2018). These are just a few of the titles to have appeared in this proliferating field over the past two centuries.

---

The Qur'anic citations used in this volume are from Alan Jones' translation of The Qur'an (Exeter, 2007), with slight modifications.

In order to facilitate the reading experience of non-specialists, I have adopted a simplified transcription that will be easily recognizable to Arabic scholars. For the benefit of the former, a few remarks regarding pronunciation: ' indicates the hamza, which corresponds to a glottal stop (e.g., the vowel between uh-oh!) and ʿ indicates a guttural sound characteristic of Arabic and other Semitic languages; gh corresponds to the uvular pronunciation of r as in Parisian French; h is pronounced as a pharyngeal (at the back of the throat); kh corresponds to the German ch (as in the word Buch); q is pronounced as an emphatic k (at the back of the throat); s is always unvoiced, as in essay, never as in easy; ṣ is realized as an emphatic s (at the back of the throat); and th corresponds to the English th as in thing and dh to the English th as in this.

For reasons of simplicity, dates exclusively follow the Gregorian calendar, without the addition of their equivalent in what is known as the hijri calendar.

INDEX

- 'Abd Allah, 131, 148n42
'Abd al-Rahman b. Ghanm, 113, 115
Abitbol, Michel, Le Passé d'une discorde, 119
Abraham: and adoption of monotheism, 67–69; hajj and, 98; and the Ka'ba in Mecca, 69–70; in the Qur'an, 2, 30, 60, 61, 65–70
Abu Bakr, 135
Abu Rayḥan al-Biruni, 107
al-Aḥbar, Ka'b, 21, 138
Akil al-murar, Ḥujr, 10
'Ali b. Abi Talib, as successor to the Prophet, 135
'Ali b. Ibrahim al-Qummi, 35
almsgiving, obligation of, 88
Amir-Moezzi, Mohammad Ali, 136
antisemitism, xiii, xv
Arabic, geo-linguistic sources of, 23
Arab Jewish poets, 20–22
Arberry, Arthur, 111
'Ashura, fast of, 98–99
'Aṣma' (poet), 21
al-'Ayyashi, Muhammad b. Mas'ud, 134
Babylonian Talmud and Talmudic literature: comparisons between the red cow and the heifer, 85; completion of Talmud, 143n14; on David's innocence, 79; on dietary prohibitions, 103; influence on the Qur'an, 61; influences on Babylonian Talmud, 128–29; and interpretation of the law, 91; in the interpretation of the Qur'an, 19; Joseph in, 72, 73; parallels with Qur'anic verses, 36–37; racism in, 144n3; on substitution
Passover, 101
banu Isra'il. See children of Israel al-Baqir, Muhammad, 124, 130–31
Bat Ye'or, 119
Becker, Carl Heinrich, 93
Benjamin of Tudela, 17–18, 26
Ben-Shammai, Haggai, 33–34; "Jew-Hatred in the Islamic Tradition and the Koranic Exegesis," 55
Bernard, Dominique, Les disciples juifs de Jésus du 1er siècle à Mahomet, xvi
Bible: and killing of the prophets, 51; Qur'an's complex attitude toward, 4; Qur'an's references to, 29; rebuke of the Jews in, 56–57; and terminology in the Qur'an, 59–60 biblical accounts and post-biblical literature: Abraham, 2, 29, 30, 65–70, 98; Cain and Abel, 62, 63–65; characteristics of Qur'an's inclusion of, 58, 60–62, 78, 85; David, 2, 75–79,

- biblical accounts and post-biblical
(continued)
80, 82, 83; Genesis, 60–63, 70;
Joseph, 62, 70–75, 87; the red heifer,
83–85; Saul/Talut, 60, 80–83
- Blachère, Régis, 44, 81
- Book of Jubilees*, 68
- Boyce, Mary, 130
- Brunschvig, Robert, “Herméneutique normative dans le judaïsme et dans l’islam,” 90
- Cahen, Claude, 113
- Cain and Abel, 62, 63–65
- calendar: harmonization of solar and lunar calendars, 104; Muslim, 98, 105–7; revisions to, 5
- Chabbi, Jacqueline, Le Coran décrypté, 6
- children of Israel (banu Isra’îl): al-yahud
as distinct from, 136; charge of usury against, 53; as chosen people, 30–35, 138; distinction with post-biblical Jews, 136; God’s covenant with, 35–38; as idolatrous, 43–44; as killers of the prophets, 51–54; neglect of a venerable inheritance by, 56–57;
protection in Egypt and the Holy Land, 38–40, 143n18; as prototype for Shi’i Muslims, 122, 130–35;
Qur’an’s contradictory verses about,
3, 28; Qur’an’s reprimand of, 32;
transformation into apes and pigs,
54–55; as unruly and rebellious,
41–42, 143n20; and worship of ‘Uzayr, 44–49
- Christians and Christianity: Catholic Church’s rejection of the Jews, 140;
as children of pigs, 54; as corrupted monotheism, 45; and dietary prohibitions, 103–4; and the Ethiopian capture of Himyar, 12; and God’s abandonment of Israel, 33; polemic against the Jews, 53; restrictions on,
112–14; Shi’ism’s positions on, 146n1
(ch. 6). See also People of the Book
Cohanim (tribes of Nadir and Quayza),
14–15, 141n12
- Cohen, Marc, 119
- Cook, Michael, 128
- Covenant with God: Israel’s breaking of, 3, 41–43, 139; and killing of the prophets, 52–53; as mark of election, 36–38
- David: and Bathsheba, 77–79; battles of, 75–76; and Goliath, 60, 76, 80, 82, 83; Muhammad’s link with,
76–77, 79; and Solomon, 2, 76
al-dhimma (Muslim protection), of the Jews, 110
dhimmis: abolishment of, 119–20; Jews
as, xiv, 117
- dietary laws, 5, 92, 102–4, 108, 126
- Docetists, 52
- Egypt. See Jews’ suffering and exodus
from Egypt
- election as chosen people: as conditional, 32–35; of Israel, 30–32, 138;
of Muslims, 34–35, 57, 131; Shi’ism
and, 35, 129–30
- Elijah, 51, 61
- Elman, Yaakov, 129
- Enoch, 45–46
- Ethiopia, 11–12
- Ezra and the return to Israel, 8. See also ‘Uzayr, worship of
- falsification of the Scriptures: Ezra’s responsibility for, 47–48; Jewish

- authors on, 49; and Karaite Judaism, 18; and lack of quotes in the Qur'an, 50–51; in Qur'an's depiction of Jews, 3, 4, 29, 41, 42–43; and references to Muhammad's coming, 4, 50, 137; Samaritan charges of, 53
- fasting, 97–101, 146n7 (ch. 4)
- Friedlaender, Israel, 17
- Gadd, C. J., 141n3 (ch. 1)
- Galor, Katharina, 13
- Gaon, Rav Hai, 17
- Gaon, Rav Sherira, 17
- Geiger, Abraham, 51, 58, 72; Was hat Mohammed aus dem Judenthume aufgenommen?, xv, 5
- Genesis, 60–63, 70
- Gibbon, Edward, Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire, 119
- Goitein, Shlomo Dov, 18, 22, 58, 93–94, 99–100; Jews and Arabs, 15
- golden calf: forgiveness and repentance for idolatry, 98, 100; worship of, 28, 32, 41, 43–44, 143n21
- Goldziher, Ignác, 44, 86; "Islamisme et Parsisme," 128
- Goldziher, Ignaz, 58
- Graetz, Heinrich, 17
- Griffith, Sidney, 58; The Bible in Arabic, 6
- Ḥadith: description of, 1; fasting in, 146n7 (ch. 4); ḥadith of stones and trees in, 55–56; Islam's desire to distinguish itself, 96, 138; isra'iliyyat in, 87, 138; Muhammad's relations with the Jews, 139; on superiority of Islam, 120
- ḥajj*, xvii, 98
- halakha*, xi, 90, 137
- Hamidullah, Muhammad, 67
- Hasmonean Dynasty, 48
- Hejaz, 9–10; Jewish settlement in, 14–17; Muslim sources and Jews of, 21–22; Talmudic Judaism in, 17–18
- hijra* (Muhammad's emigration to Medina), 23, 28, 99, 105, 139
- Ḥimyar, kingdom of: and the Cohanim, 15–16; Ethiopian conquest of, 11–12; Ḥimyarite settlement in Palestine, 12–14; origins and growth of, 10–11
- Ḥimyarite burial chamber, 12
- Hirschberg, H. Z., 21; The Jews in Arabia, 12–13
- Hirschfeld, Hartwig, 17
- Holy Land: Ḥimyarite settlement in, 12–14; Qur'an's identification of, 39–40; settling of, 38–39, 138
- Horowitz, Josef, 51, 58; Koranische Untersuchungen, 5
- Ḥusayn, martyrdom of, 99
- Ibn Ḥazm, 'Ali b. Aḥmad, 47–48, 49
- Ibn Kathir, Isma'il b. 'Umar, 109
- Ibn Qayyim al-Jawziyya, Aḥkam ahl al-dhimma, 112–17
- idolatry, xvi, 3, 43–49, 103–4
- Imams, 35, 124–25, 129, 131, 132, 148n34
- impurity: and contact with cadavers, 83, 141n8; of non-Muslim people, 121–22, 123–25, 127, 147n5; restrictions on food consumption and marriage, 125–27, 148n27; spiritual and legal, 123–25; Zoroastrian law compared to Shi'i law, 128
- 'Imran, as chosen, 30
- infidels: distinctions among, 147n4; in Exodus, 43; Jews as, 123; populations defined as, 123, 127, 129, 147n4
- Iran, dhimma restrictions in, 120
- Iraq, Muslim legal schools in, 128

- Islam: ambivalence in relationship with Judaism, xii, xiii, 4; assertion of superiority of, 111–12; cultural context for emergence of, 2–3; five pillars of, 60, 97, 98; founding of, 24; and monotheism, 68–69; stereotypes about tolerance under, 118–19; superiority of, 111–12, 120, 137; view of the Bible, 49. See also Muhammad (the Prophet); Muslims; Qur'an; Shi'i Islam; Sunni Islam; Twelver Shi'ism
- Islamic extremism: and clarity in the Qur'an, 42; weaponizing Qur'anic verses, xiii–xiv
- Islamic studies: emergence of, 58; Friday as the day of great prayer, 93–94; place of comparative jurisprudence in, 89–90; Shi'i Islam in, xvii. See also Boyce, Mary; Cook, Michael; Elman, Yaakov; Goldziher, Ignác; Secunda, Shai; Wensinck, Arent J., Muhammad and the Jews of Medina
- isra'iliyyat*, 87, 138
- Istanbul, xii
- Jacob: appearance in the Qur'an, 103; in Genesis story of Joseph, 70–71, 72–73, 74–75; Muhammad's identification with, 131, 148nn40 and 42
- Jeffery, Arthur, The Foreign Vocabulary of the Qur'an, 59
- Jerusalem, holiness of, 96–97
- Jesus: crucifixion of, 51, 52; divinity of, 45, 123
- Jewish law: archaeological evidence of practices of, 13–14; and complexity of the calendar, 104, 106; dietary laws, 102–4, 108; Qur'anic attitude toward, xii, 102–3
- Jews: Arab Jewish poets, 20–22; delegitimization of, 55; earliest settlement in Arabia, 8–12; as fellow minority group, xiv; history under Islam of, 119; Islam's tolerance of, xi–xii; knowledge of Jewish communities in Arabia, 26; of Medina, 24, 88, 99; as protected minority, 4, 112, 116, 118–19, 139; Qur'anic relationship to, 1–2, 3, 37–38; Qur'anic terms for, 28–30. See also children of Israel; falsification of the Scriptures; Himyar; Judaism; Mishna; People of the Book; pre-Islamic historical context; Talmud and Talmudic literature; Torah
- Jews' suffering and exodus from Egypt, 2, 30–33, 38, 132
- jizya* (tribute tax), 111–12, 116, 144n3
- Job (Ayyub), 2, 61
- Johns, A. H., 79
- Jonas (Yunus, or Dhu l-nun), 2, 60
- Jones, Alan, trans., 111; The Qur'an, 6
- Joseph: biblical stories of, 62, 70–75; in the Ḥadith collections, 87; Jacob and, 70–71, 72–73, 74–75; seduction of, 72–74, 75
- Juda and Tamar, 48
- Judaism: as corrupted monotheism, 45; forms influencing the Qur'an, 17–20; Islam's ambivalence in relationship with, 4; purity laws in, 128, 130, 141n8. See also falsification of the Scriptures; Hejaz; Jewish law; pre-Islamic historical context; Qur'an; rabbinic Judaism
- Judean ethnicity, 15–16

- Judeo-Christian tradition, xi, xvi, 19
Judeo-Islamic tradition, xi
- Ka'ba, 69–70, 96
Karaite Judaism, 18
Katsh, Abraham, Judaism in Islam, 84
Ketaba de-Himyaraya, 15–16
Khaybar, battle of, 26
Kohlberg, Etan, 135
- Lazarus-Yafeh, Hava, 58
Lecker, Michael, 14
Lewis, Bernard, The Jews of Islam, 118–19
Libson, Gideon, Jewish and Islamic Law, 145n3
Lory, Pierre, 79
Lot and his kin, 2, 48, 60, 61
- al-Maghribi, al-Samaw'al, Ifham al-yahud, 48–49
al-Majlisi, Muhammad Baqir, 127;
Bihar al-anwar, 123–24
Mazuz, Haggai, The Religious and Spiritual Life of the Jews of Medina, 90
Mecca: as direction for prayer, 5; hijra, 105; as holy place, 69, 96; Muhammad in, 2, 23; Muhammad's adversaries in, 24, 25, 88; pilgrimage to, xvii, 5, 69–70, 98; polytheists of, 122
Meccan suras and verses, 28, 68, 88
Medina (former Yathrib): first Islamic state in, 23–24; Jewish settlement in, 14; Jew's expulsion from, 55; Muhammad's reprisals against the Jews in, 24–26; as a priestly town, 15; Qur'anic references to Jews of, 16
Medina Constitution, 23
Medinan Judaism, 90, 108
Medinan suras and verses, 28
midrashim: fast of Kippur, 100; Genesis Rabbah, 68; isra'iliyyat in Qur'anic tradition, 85–87; Joseph in, 73–74; Qur'an's reliance on, 61; on the red heifer and the heifer whose neck was broken, 85; on temptation of Joseph, 72; vestiges in Muslim texts, 70
Midrash Tanhuma, Qur'anic analogies with, 65
Mikhail, Alan, xii
Mishna, 64, 100–101, 144n3
monotheism: Abraham and, 68–69; Arab monotheism, xvi; criticism of Jews and Christians concerning, 106–7; in Himyar, 10
Moses: as central figure in the Qur'an, 2, 60, 61; and the divine commandment, 83–84; as example to the Shi'a, 133–34; and liberation from Egypt, 132; and Muslim fasting, 98–99; Qur'anic references to, 32; receipt of the commandments, 100; and the true religion, 135; verses on entry into the Holy Land, 39
Muhammad (the Prophet): Abraham as model for, 69; battles waged by, 24–26, 38; contact with Jews, 2–3; as heir to biblical tradition, 75; hijra of, 23, 28, 99, 105, 139; identification with Israel/Jacob, 131, 148nn40 and 42; leadership in Medina, 23–24; links with David, 76, 79; links with Moses, 98; marriages of, 126; and the Meccan suras, 88; naming of 'Ali as his successor, 135; and polemic with the Jews regarding prayer, 95, 96; prediction of his coming, 49–50; refusals to recognize, 82; as servant, 148n43; split with the Jews, 106, 139; as successor to the

- Muhammad (the Prophet) (continued)
prophets, 98; and the Torah, 40–41;
tribe of, 23; visits to Palestine, 22
- Muhammad Ibn Isḥāq, Sira, 26
- muslim, term of, 68
- Muslims: as the chosen people, 34–35,
57, 131; efforts to distinguish themselves, 93, 96, 105, 107, 138; and observance of God’s commandments, 33; selective re-readings of the Qur’an by, xiii–ix
- al-Mutawwakil, 113
- Nabonidus’ account of conquest, 9–10,
141n3 (ch. 1)
- Newby, Gordon D., 8, 45–46
- Noah, 60, 61, 63
- Nuwas, Yusuf Dhu, 11
- Pact of ‘Umar: and attitudes toward Jews, 118; legal codification based on, 117; reminders to observe, 119;
restrictions on minorities in, 112–13;
text of, 113–16
- parable of the ass carrying books, 56–57
- Passover, 101
- People of the Book (ahl al-kitab):
humiliation and poverty of, 108–9;
Jews as, 4–5; and Muhammad’s faith, 16; Qur’an’s description of, 29, 106–7; Qur’an’s warning to, 3;
restrictions on, 112–16, 121–22,
124–25; transformation into apes and pigs, 54. See also Christians and Christianity; Pact of ‘Umar;
Zoroastrians
- post-Qur’anic tradition and sources:
ambivalence with the Bible, 49; and legal status of religious minorities,
109; references to Jewish influences,
16; “stories of the prophets” in, 60;
and understanding the Qur’an, 1;
verbosity of literature of, 64, 79.
See also Ḥadith; Sira
- prayer: Arabic term for, 92; calls to, 93;
direction of prayer, 94–97; Friday as the principal day of prayer, 93–94;
obligation of, 88, 89
- pre-Islamic historical context: anti-
Jewish polemical tradition, 53–54;
Arabic fasting, 97; Arab virtues
in, 20–21; and birth of Islam, xvi;
ethnicity of Jews in Arabia, 16–17;
Jewish kingdom of Ḥimyar, 10–14;
Jewish settlement in, 8–10; Jews and Judaism in Hejaz, 14–20; Jews in Palestine, 12–14; Muslim sources for,
8, 21–22, 26; pagan Arab calendars,
106; prayer in Arab communities,
92; Southern and Northern Arabs,
22–23, 142n25
- Procopius of Caesarea, 12
- prophets: immunity from sin and error, 78; killing of, 51–54, 109,
138–39; in the Qur’an, 62–63;
“stories of the prophets,” 60–61, 86
protégés, Islamic legislation on, 112–17.
See also al-dhimma; dhimmis
- Psalms, Book of (al-Zabur), 29, 76,
143n28
- al-Qays, Imru’, 12–13
- al-Qummi, ‘Ali b. Ibrahim, 133
- Qur’an: ambivalence toward the Bible in, 50–51; biblical figures and stories in, xvii, 61–62; contradictory verses in, xiii; and discrimination against the Jews, 111; dual perspective on Jews and Judaism, 137; examples of Judaism in, 2–3; focus of

- traditional exegesis on, 140;
Hebrew vocabulary in, 59–60, 144n1; importance of oral tradition in understanding, 1, 27–28; on Jewish differences in pre-Islamic Arabia, 18; on Jewish setbacks, 24–25; and the legal status of Jews, 109 (see also Pact of ‘Umar); omnipresence of Jews and Israelites in, 138–39; parable in, 56; structure and interpretation of, xv, 27–28, 42; weaponization of, xiii–xiv, 140. See also biblical accounts and post-biblical literature; children of Israel; falsification of the Scriptures; idolatry; People of the Book; post-Qur’anic tradition and sources
- qur’an*, linguistic roots of, xvii
- Qur’anic Judaism, sources of, 17–20
- Qur’anic law: ambivalence in, 5; on the calendar, 92, 104–7; dietary laws, 92, 102–4; on fasting (ṣawm), 92, 97–101; legal interpretations of, 91; on prayer (ṣalat) and its orientation (qibla), 92–97, 93; similarity to Jewish law, 89, 90–91, 107–8. See also impurity
- rabbinic Judaism: and Cain, 64–65; David’s sins in, 78; distinction from other sects, 18; and Ḥimyar, 14; and impurity, 128; and Joseph, 73; Medinan Judaism’s divergence from, 90; rabbinic exegesis in the Qur’an, 85; terminology in, 59–60
- Rabin, Chaim, “Islam and the Qumran Sect,” 18
- Ramadan, 97, 99, 100–101
- red heifer, biblical story of, 83–85
- Reynolds, Gabriel Said, 58; The Qur’an and the Bible, xv, 6
- Rubin, Uri, 58; Between Bible and Qur’an, 6; “The Direction of Prayer in Islam,” 96–97
- al-Ṣadiq, Ja’far, 124, 125, 131, 134
- ṣalat*, linguistic roots of, xvii
- Salomon ben Adret, 49
- Samaritans, 43–44, 53
- al-Samaw’al, (Shemu’el) b. ‘Adiya,’ 20
- Sarah (poet), 21
- al-Sarakhsi, Shams al-Din, Kitab al-mabsut, 117
- Sassanian Empire, 128
- Saul/Talut, 60, 80–83
- Secunda, Shai, 129
- Shabbat, compared to Islam’s Friday day of prayer, 94
- shari’a*, xi, 137
- Sharon, Moshe, 20
- Sheba, Queen of, 9
- Shi’i Islam: adherents as persecuted minority, 129–30, 133, 135; attitude toward Judaism, 121, 136, 146n1 (ch. 6); author’s attention to, xvii; children of Israel as prototype to, 130–35; codification of Jews as *dhimmi*s, 117; election as chosen people, 35; and the fast of ‘Ashura, 99; importance in Islam, 4; and transmigration of the soul, 54. See also Twelver Shi’ism
- Shirazi, Ayatu’llah Muhammad al-Ḥusayni, 123, 127
- Sibony, Daniel, Coran et Bible en questions et réponses, 6
- Sidersky, David, 58; Les Origines des légendes musulmanes dans le Coran et les vies des prophètes, 5

- Sira* (“biographies” of the Prophet), 26, 55, 139
- Solomon, 9, 60, 76
- Soroudi, Sorour, 126, 128
- Speyer, Heinrich, Die biblischen Erzählungen im Qoran, 5
- Speyer, Helmut, 58
- State of Israel: creation of, 139; domination of Muslims in, 120
- Stroumsa, Guy G., xvi
- Sunni Islam: attitude toward Judaism, 121; codification of Jews as dhimmis, 117; on transformation into apes, 54; views on impurity, 123, 125–26
- sura*, linguistic roots of the term, xvii
- Syriac Church Fathers, 19–20, 74–75
- al-Tabari, Abu Ja‘far Muḥammad b. Jarir: on conditional election, 33, 34–35; on Enoch, 46; on infidels, 147n4; on the sacrifice of Abraham’s son, 67; on Saul/Talut, 81; Universal History, 83; on ‘Uzayr, 47
- al-Tabrisi, Abu ‘Ali al-Fadl b. al-Ḥasan, 133–34
- Talmud. See Babylonian Talmud and Talmudic literature
- terminology, pronunciation guide, 6–7
- al-Tha‘labi, Abu Iṣḥaq Aḥmad b. Muḥammad al-Naysaburi, Qisaṣ al-anbiya’, 46, 80
- Torah: children of Israel’s acceptance of, 36–37; giving of, 138; Jewish corruption of, xii; oral tradition surrounding, 1; Qur’an’s commitment to, 137; story of Joseph in, 62; ‘Uzayr’s rediscovery of, 46–47; as validation of the Qur’an, 40–41, 49. See also biblical accounts and post-biblical literature
- Torrey, Charles, The Jewish Foundation of Islam, 104
- trade, Jews of pre-Islamic Arabia and, 13, 14–15
- al-Tusi, Abu Ja‘far, 127, 148n27; al-Istibṣar fi ma khtulifa min al-akhbar, 117; Tahdhib al-aḥkam, 117
- Twelver Shi‘ism: attitude toward children of Israel, 33; dietary restrictions to avoid impurity, 126; election as chosen people, 129–30; importance in Islam, 4; Jewish influence on legal schools of, 128–29; Jews and Christians as ritually impure, 123, 147n5; marriage with People of the Book, 126, 147n23; origins of rigorism in, 127–30; restrictions regarding legal impurity, 124, 126–27, 136, 148n27; tradition of rank in, 135
- ‘Umar b. ‘Abd al-‘Aziz, 112, 135
- ‘Umar ibn al-Khattab, 105, 112, 113, 115–16
- ‘umra, linguistic roots of, xvii
- unbelievers (kafirun), 29–30
- ‘Uthman, 135
- ‘Uzayr, worship of, 44–49
- Wahb b. Munabbih, 138; Kitab al-isra’iliyyat, 86–87
- Wensinck, Arent Jan, 93, 128; Muhammad and the Jews of Medina, 89
- Wieder, Naphtali, The Judean Scrolls and Karais, 18
- Witztum, Joseph, 75; “Joseph among the Ishmaelites,” 74; “The Syriac Milieu of the Quran,” 19
- al-yahud* (the Jews), Qur’an’s description of, 29. See also children of Israel; Jews; People of the Book

- Yemeni Jews, 8–9, 11, 13
Yule, Paul, 13
Yusuf and Zulaykha, 71
- zakat*, linguistic roots of, xvii
Zayd b. Thabit, 16
Zellentin, Holger Michael, *The
Quar'ān's Legal Culture*, 19
- Zionism, 139
Zoroastrians: influence on the Babylonian Talmud, 129; and laws on purity, 124–25, 128, 130; Pact of 'Umar restrictions on, 113; as “people of the book,” 106; Shi'ism's positions on, 146n1 (ch. 6);
tolerance of minorities by, 116